Counsel for Petitioners

QUESTION PRESENTED

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (“ERISA”) governs employers that offer pensions and other benefits to their employees. “Church plans” are exempt from ERISA’s coverage. 29 U.S.C. §§ 1002(33), 1003(b)(2). For over thirty years, the three federal agencies that administer and enforce ERISA—the Internal Revenue Service, the Department of Labor, and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation—have interpreted the church plan exemption to include pension plans maintained by otherwise qualifying organizations that are associated with or controlled by a church, whether or not a church itself established the plan.

The question presented is whether the church plan exemption applies so long as a pension plan is maintained by an otherwise qualifying church-affiliated organization, or whether the exemption applies only if, in addition, a church initially established the plan.

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDING

Petitioners Saint Peter's Healthcare System, Ronald C. Rak, Susan Ballestero, and Garrick Stoldt were the defendants in the district court and the appellants in the Third Circuit.

Respondent Laurence Kaplan was the plaintiff in the district court and the appellee in the Third Circuit.

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

In accordance with Supreme Court Rule 29.6, Petitioners make the following disclosures:

Saint Peter's Healthcare System has no parent, and no publicly held company owns 10% or more of its stock. The sole member of Saint Peter's Healthcare System is the Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Metuchen, New Jersey.

OPINIONS BELOW

The Third Circuit’s opinion (App. 1a) is reported at 810 F.3d 175. The district court’s opinion (App. 29a) is unreported and is available at 2014 WL 1284854.

JURISDICTION

The Third Circuit issued its decision on Dec. 29, 2015 (App. 1a), and denied rehearing en banc on March 18, 2016 (App. 27a-28a). On May 25, 2016, Justice Alito extended the time for filing this petition to and including July 18, 2016. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

PROVISIONS INVOLVED

The statutory and constitutional provisions involved include § 3(33) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (“ERISA”), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33); § 414(e) of the Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C. § 414(e); and the First Amendment, U.S. Const. amend. I. These provisions are set forth in appendix E.

STATEMENT

It has been settled law for well over thirty years that pension plans maintained by otherwise qualifying church-affiliated organizations are exempt from ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., whether or not a church itself established the plan. The three federal agencies charged with interpreting ERISA—the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), Department of Labor (DOL), and Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC)—agree that such plans qualify for ERISA’s “church plan” exemption, and since 1983 have issued opinion after opinion reaffirming that view. Countless nonprofit religious hospitals, orphanages, schools, day-care centers, and old-age homes have structured their pension plans in reliance on these agencies' views and on the until-now-unanimous lower court decisions confirming their exempt status.

Two recent appellate decisions throw all this into disarray. The Third and Seventh Circuits have recently held that ERISA's church plan exemption applies only if a church "established" the plan. These decisions are squarely at odds with the views of the relevant federal agencies. They conflict with the decisions of two other federal courts of appeals. They are contrary to the plain statutory text, and they resurrect problems of denominational discrimination that 1980 amendments to the exemption were designed to erase.

It is hard to overstate the burden and havoc these two decisions have created. The decisions have prompted dozens of class-action lawsuits against religious organizations that have relied on the church plan exemption for decades. Twenty-two such suits have been filed in the last four months alone. The lawsuits seek billions upon billions of dollars in retroactive liability for noncompliance with ERISA's recordkeeping and other procedural requirements, from which church plans are exempt.

Three days ago, the nonprofit hospital defendant in the Seventh Circuit case filed a petition for certiorari asking this Court to decide whether the church plan exemption contains a "church establishment" requirement. Advocate Health Care Network v. Stapleton, No. 16-74. This case presents the same question. As Advocate explains in its petition, the question presented is immensely important. It affects hundreds, probably thousands, of nonprofit religious employers and millions of employees. These lawsuits have already caused a massive upheaval in the administration of pension plans by religious employers, and they impose substantial burdens on the judicial system and litigants. A significant federal regulatory scheme now applies differently in different circuits. And absent this Court's intervention, courts, employers, and the government must muddle through the many imponderables left in the wake of these decisions, including the scope of retroactive liability and the contours and import of the newly created church-establishment requirement.

The Court should act now. The Court should either grant this petition as a companion to Advocate and hear the two cases together, or grant Advocate and hold this petition pending the disposition of Advocate. The defendants in these suits are nonprofit organizations serving the needy for whom the potential financial liability could be crippling. And affected religious organizations operating in the Third or Seventh Circuit will be forced to restructure their pension plans to comply with ERISA. This will mean renegotiating contracts with employees whose benefits are covered by collective bargaining agreements, revamping benefit structures, redesigning pension funding policies, and overhauling budget plans. It would be impossible to unring the bell if the Court later decides that these recent decisions are wrong, and that the three federal agencies that administer ERISA are right.

A. Statutory Background

1. Congress has exempted “church plans” from the requirements of ERISA since it enacted the statute in 1974. 29 U.S.C. § 1003(b)(2) (1974). Church plans “are some of the oldest retirement plans in the country,” and “[s]everal date back to the 1700’s.” 125

Cong. Rec. 10,052 (1979) (statement of Sen. Talmadge). ERISA regulation, Congress determined, would represent “an unjustified invasion of the confidential relationship that is believed to be appropriate with regard to churches and their religious activities.” S. Rep. No. 93-383 at 81 (1973).

As originally enacted in 1974, ERISA defined an exempt “church plan” as “(i) a plan established and maintained for its employees by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or (ii) a plan described in subparagraph (C).” 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(A) (1976).¹ Subparagraph (C) in turn contained a temporary transitional provision regarding existing plans established and maintained for the employees of “one or more agencies of [a] church.” Id. § 1002(33)(C). Such plans were “treated as a ‘church plan,’” but only plans “in existence on January 1, 1974,” and even for those plans, only through 1982. Id. Parallel, identical provisions of the Internal Revenue Code define the term “church plan” for tax and PBGC insurance purposes. 26 U.S.C. § 414(e) (1976); 29 U.S.C. § 1321(b)(3).

2. In 1977, the IRS determined that the church plan exemption did not cover pension plans established and maintained by two orders of Catholic sisters for the employees of their hospitals. IRS Gen. Couns. Mem. 37,266, 1977 WL 46200 (Sept. 22, 1977). The IRS reasoned that, under then-proposed regulations, a religious order is not a “church” unless the order “is engaged in carrying out the functions of a church.” Id. at *4. The IRS further reasoned that “carrying out the functions of a church means carrying out the religious functions of the church,” which the IRS limited to the “ministration of sacerdotal functions and the conduct of religious worship.” Id. at *4-5 (quotation marks omitted). The IRS thus found it irrelevant that healing the sick is a religious duty in the Catholic faith, concluding that “[t]he fact that an activity is required by the tenets of the church does not necessarily mean that it is a church function as that term is commonly understood.” Id. at *5. The IRS concluded that the sisters’ services to the sick “are not ‘church functions’ ... since they are not religious.” Id.

In response, religious groups of all denominations objected to the “intrusion of the [IRS] into the affairs of church groups and their agencies by presuming to define what is and what is not an integral part of these religious groups’ mission.” 125 Cong. Rec. 10,054-57. The groups explained that the IRS’s view would require churches to expel from their pension plans the employees of affiliated organizations. Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Private Pension Plans and Emp. Fringe Benefits, 96th Cong. 384 (1979). The groups also warned that the IRS interpretation could prohibit a church from establishing and maintaining an exempt plan indirectly through an affiliated organization, such as a church “pension board.” Id. at 387, 481.

3. In 1980, Congress amended the church plan exemption, making two principal changes. Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act (“MPPAA”), Pub. L. 96-364, § 407. First, Congress made the church the employer of employees of church-affiliated organizations. Section 1002(33)(C)(ii) now defines the term “employee of a church” to “include[] ... an employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is [a nonprofit] and which is controlled by or associated with a church.” See also 26 U.S.C. § 414(e)(3)(B) (parallel tax provision). A “church ... shall be deemed the employer of any individual included as an employee under clause (ii).” 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(iii); see 26 U.S.C. § 414(e)(3)(C) (parallel tax provision).

Second, Congress added new § 1002(33)(C)(i), which states:

A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church ... includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church ..., if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church

29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(i); see 26 U.S.C. § 414(e)(3)(A) (parallel tax provision). Thus, while the original Act defined a “church plan” as a plan “established and maintained by a church,” § 1002(33)(A), the Act now provides that a plan “established and maintained by a church ... includes a plan maintained by an organization [that] is controlled by or associated with a church,” § 1002(33)(C)(i).

4. In 1983, the IRS concluded that, in light of the 1980 amendment, a plan maintained by a church-affiliated retirement committee is a church plan reardless of whether it was established by a church. IRS Gen. Couns. Mem. 39,007, 1983 WL 197946, at *1-2 (July 1, 1983). The IRS explained that a plan covering employees of churches or church-affiliated organizations may qualify as a church plan in two ways. First, a church plan may “be established and maintained by a church.” Id. at *5. The IRS reiterated its view that religious orders operating hospitals or the like are not “churches.” Id. at *4. But under the amended exemption, “this nonchurch status is not fatal.” Id. That is because, alternatively, a church plan may be “maintained ... by an organization described in” the tax-code equivalent of § 1002(33)(C)(i)—i.e., by a church-controlled or associated organization, including a retirement committee. Id. at *5. “[B]ecause of the passage of the MPPA[A],” the IRS explained, “church plan status no longer hinges on whether an order is a church.” Id. at *6.

Since then, the IRS has issued more than 500 private letter rulings confirming that plans maintained by qualifying church-affiliated organizations—including specifically petitioner’s plan—are exempt regardless of whether they were established by churches. App. 80a-121a. The agency issued its most recent church plan ruling while this case was pending in the Third Circuit. See IRS PLR 2015-51004, 2015 WL 9245327 (Dec. 18, 2015).

The DOL likewise has issued nearly 70 advisory opinions determining that pension plans maintained by qualifying church-affiliated organizations are church plans regardless of whether they were established by churches. App. 74a-79a. And the PBGC does not insure plans that are exempt because they are maintained by church-affiliated organizations, regardless of whether they were established by churches. See PBGC Op. Ltr. 78-1 (Jan. 5, 1978); PBGC, Questions to the PBGC and Summary of Their Responses 25 (Mar. 2011), <http://www.pbgc.gov/documents/2011bluebook.pdf>.

5. Since 1983, Congress has passed three statutes that presume that church-affiliated organizations can establish an exempt church plan.² And Congress has never disturbed the consistent, longstanding, unanimous interpretation by the IRS, DOL, and PBGC, even though it has had ample opportunity to do so. Congress has amended ERISA's definition section a dozen times,³ and has incorporated or referenced the definition of "church plan" in more than a dozen provisions across the U.S. Code.⁴

B. Factual Background

1. Petitioner Saint Peter’s Healthcare System is a nonprofit hospital system owned and controlled by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Metuchen. COA App. 224-25. Petitioner operates a single hospital, Saint Peter’s University Hospital, a teaching hospital in New Brunswick, New Jersey. Petitioner also operates a handful of other nonprofit healthcare facilities, including an ambulatory surgery center, an outpatient clinic, and a facility for child victims of sexual abuse. The Bishop of Metuchen is the sole member of Saint Peter’s and appoints the President, CEO, CFO, and Secretary. COA App. 338. With the exception of two representatives from the hospital’s medical staff required by state law, the Bishop appoints every member of Saint Peter’s Board and can remove any member at will. COA App. 338. The Bishop holds veto power over any action by the Board. COA App. 338.

The Catholic Church lists Saint Peter’s in The Official Catholic Directory, COA App. 341, and Saint Peter’s makes its Catholic affiliation apparent to all. Mass is said daily, and daily morning prayers are broadcast over the public address system. Board meetings begin with prayer. Saint Peter’s provides healthcare services in accord with the Ethical and Religious Directives for Catholic Health Care Services, guidelines promulgated by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops that provide “authoritative guidance on certain moral issues that face Catholic health care today.” COA App. 225.

2. In 1974, Saint Peter’s launched a generous, non-contributory defined benefit retirement plan (the “Plan”). Saint Peter’s never made an election under 26 U.S.C. § 410(d)—a statutory provision that permits church plans to voluntarily but irrevocably give up their church plan status—but for many years voluntarily treated the plan as if it were an ERISA plan. In 2005, however, the IRS announced new funding requirements that would have devastated Saint Peter’s ability to provide free care to the needy. The requirements would have mandated an immediate one-time contribution of $28 million, COA App. 1530—nearly the entire amount that Saint Peter’s allocates for charitable care each year. COA App. 341. Complying with those new requirements would likely have required Saint Peter’s to implement layoffs. COA App. 1531. Instead of making a one-time contribution of $28 million, Saint Peter’s decided to contribute the additional $28 million over a period of three years, to avoid any need for layoffs and to enable it to continue offering the charitable care essential to its Catholic mission. COA App. 1531-32.

Accordingly, Saint Peter’s asked the IRS to confirm that its Plan was a “church plan” exempt from ERISA. COA App. 530. In 2013, consistent with its decades-old interpretation of the church plan exemption, the IRS issued a private letter ruling concluding that the Plan is exempt because it is maintained by an organization that is associated with and controlled by the Catholic Church. COA App. 530-34. The IRS further confirmed that the Plan “has been a church plan ... retroactive to January 1, 1974.” COA App. 534.

Saint Peter’s has made the $28 million contribution, and the respondent in this case continues to receive his full retirement benefits, as does every participant in the Plan.

C. Proceedings Below

1. In 2013, despite 30 years of administrative and judicial decisions confirming that church plans need not be established by churches, an alliance of two plaintiff firms began bringing putative class actions against nonprofit religious employers across the nation, contending that their pension plans were not church plans because they were not established by churches. As the firms themselves recently observed, these lawyers “have for years together developed and litigated the innovative theory of liability at issue here.” Mot. To Consolidate Actions and To Be Appointed Interim Lead Plaintiff and Interim Co-Lead Counsel at 1, Garbaccio v. St. Joseph’s Hosp. et al., No. 16-cv-2740 (D.N.J. May 27, 2016) (emphasis added).

On May 7, 2013, represented by the same two law firms, respondent—a former Saint Peter’s employee—filed this putative class action against Saint Peter’s and several of its officers, all of whom are petitioners here. Respondent sought a declaration that Saint Peter’s Plan was not established by a church and thus was not eligible for the church plan exemption.⁵ Respondent also sought an injunction to bring the Plan in compliance with ERISA, damages, disgorgement, civil money penalties of up to $110 per class member per day for three separate claims, prejudgment interest, costs, and attorneys' fees and expenses. Respondent also alleged—as the plaintiffs in the present onslaught of church plan litigation do in every case—that Saint Peter's plan was underfunded, but in fact the Plan is funded at a level above IRS's minimum funding guidelines for ERISA plans. COA App. 1533. Respondent did not allege that he had been denied any financial benefit to which he is entitled under the Plan.

⁵ Respondent also alleged that Saint Peter’s plan was not maintained by an organization, “whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits.” 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(i). The IRS, DOL, and PBGC have long agreed that a religious organization may satisfy the “principal purpose” requirement by creating a pension committee, as Saint Peter’s has done. The courts below did not rule on this aspect of respondent’s complaint.

On March 31, 2014, the district court denied Saint Peter's motion to dismiss. The court rejected Saint Peter's argument that the Plan is a church plan because it is maintained by a qualifying church-affiliated organization under § 1002(33)(C)(i), regardless of who established it. Puzzlingly, the court stated that its reading was “consonant with the two appellate decisions that [at that time had] addressed the church plan definition,” App. 43a, even though both appellate courts had stated that a church plan need not be established by a church. Lown v. Cont'l Cas. Co., 238 F.3d 543, 547 (4th Cir. 2001); Chronister v. Baptist Health, 442 F.3d 648, 653-54 (8th Cir. 2006).

The court subsequently certified its decision for interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). App. 64a-65a. The court observed that the “cases [interpreting the church plan exemption] conflict with each other in their analysis” and “there is substantial ground for difference of opinion whether a [non-church] can establish and maintain a church plan.” App. 59a.

2. The Third Circuit affirmed, holding that church plans must be established only by churches. Textually, although § 1002(33)(C)(i) provides that “a plan established and maintained ... by a church ... includes a plan maintained by [a qualifying church-affiliated] organization,” the court concluded that “only the [maintenance requirement] is expanded by the use of ‘includes,’” and that the amendment therefore “did not do away with the requirement that a church establish a plan in the first instance.” App. 13a.

The Third Circuit denied rehearing en banc. App. 27a-28a.

Ascension Health*, No. 14-1735 (6th Cir.). Additional church plan class actions are currently pending in district courts within the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Circuits. Supra n.6.

The pace of new filings is only accelerating—plaintiffs have filed 22 new complaints since the decision below. Id. These suits seek billions of dollars in retroactive liability and a wholesale upheaval in the administration of pension plans affecting religious employers and employees across the country. Just one of these cases alone might warrant certiorari. But an explosion of litigation of this magnitude in such an important and recurring area of ERISA, where national uniformity is paramount, plainly warrants this Court’s review.

A. The Third and Seventh Circuits Upset Three Decades of Administrative Practice

1. The Third and Seventh Circuits upended the consistent, longstanding position of all three federal agencies Congress charged with enforcing ERISA. In so doing, the courts upset the settled expectations of hundreds, probably thousands, of church-affiliated ministries, which provide benefits to millions of current and former employees across the country. Those religious employers, many for decades, have relied on the agencies’ established, unanimous administrative interpretation when designing their benefits programs.

Since 1983, the IRS, DOL, and PBGC have consistently informed these employers that their pension and welfare plans are exempt from ERISA, regardless of whether a church established the plans. Although the current wave of litigation involves only hospitals, the decision below applies to all religious employers whose pension plans were not established by a church. The IRS alone has issued more than 500 letter rulings to a vast array of religious employers large and small. In addition to the ruling it issued expressly approving the church plan status of petitioner Saint Peter's plan, the IRS has issued rulings on the plans of religious universities,⁷ schools,⁸ old-age homes,⁹ youth programs,¹⁰ "a charitable day care center, school, and nursery,"¹¹ "a regional mental health facility,"¹² homes for "poor, destitute and homeless children,"¹³ and an organization serving "people who are developmentally disabled."¹⁴ The DOL has issued nearly 70 advisory opinions to a similarly broad spectrum of religious ministries. App. 74a-79a (listing opinions issued to hospitals, schools, elder care organizations, theological seminaries, and nursing homes, among others). The PBGC has confirmed that these organizations need not pay insurance premiums. E.g., Owens v. St. Anthony Med. Ctr., Inc., No. 14-cv-4068, 2015 WL 3819086, at *4 (N.D. Ill. June 18, 2015). These agencies have told religious employers that they may organize their pension programs around these administrative determinations. Rev. Proc. 2016-1, 2016-1 I.R.B. 1, § 11.01; ERISA Proc. 76-1, § 10.

2. Countless other church-affiliated organizations that have not received their own express administrative determination have likewise reasonably relied on the agencies' settled interpretation. Before the current onslaught of litigation began in 2013, every court to consider the issue had held or assumed that church plans need not be established by churches. E.g., Lown, 238 F.3d at 547; Chronister, 442 F.3d at 653-54; Thorkelson v. Publ'g House of Evangelical Lutheran Church in Am., 764 F. Supp. 2d 1119, 1127 (D. Minn. 2011); Ward v. Unum Life Ins. Co. of Am., No. 09-cv-431, 2010 WL 4337821, at *2 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 25, 2010); Catholic Charities of Maine, Inc. v. City of Portland, 304 F. Supp. 2d 77, 84-85 (D. Me. 2004). As one commentator has explained, “[f]or about 30 years, everyone thought they knew what a church plan was.” Susan Katz Hoffman, When is a Church Not a Church? Kaplan v. St. Peter’s Healthcare System, 24 ERISA Litig. Rep., No. 1, Feb. 2016, at 3.

The vast majority of benefit plans currently operated as church plans were not established by churches themselves. Of the hundreds of church plans described in IRS letter rulings, DOL advisory opinions, and judicial opinions, only a handful were established by a church. See IRS PLR 200326038, 2003 WL 21483121 (June 27, 2003); IRS PLR 9835028, 1998 WL 545377 (Aug. 28, 1998); IRS PLR 8837061, 1988 WL 572737 (Sept. 16, 1988); IRS PLR 8447052, 1984 WL 268327 (Aug. 21, 1984).¹⁵ Even plans established solely for clergy are often established not by the church itself but by pension boards. A pension plan for Baptist “ordained ministers,” for example, “was established and maintained by the [Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board].” Coleman-Edwards v. Simpson, No. 03-cv-3779, 2008 WL 820021, at *12 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 2008). Under the decision below, all of these plans, which may have been operating as church plans for years or even decades, are suddenly not church plans. And that is so even where the plan sponsors are associated with or controlled by a church.

3. An appellate decision upsetting three decades of administrative practice by three federal agencies and the reliance interests of so many employers would warrant this Court’s immediate review in any context. The Court has regularly granted certiorari in analogous or even less compelling circumstances. E.g., Household Credit Servs., Inc. v. Pfennig, 541 U.S. 232 (2004) (granting certiorari where court of appeals rejected longstanding Federal Reserve Board interpretation); Young v. Cmty. Nutrition Inst., 476 U.S. 974, 975 (1986) (FDA interpretation); Morton v. Ruiz, 415 U.S. 199, 201-02 (1974) (BIA interpretation); see generally Stephen M. Shapiro et al., Supreme Court Practice 269 (10th ed. 2013) (citing additional cases). But a decision upending three decades of consistent administrative practice by three federal agencies surely warrants this Court’s review in the context of ERISA, a highly reticulated scheme where agency deference is at its apex. Beck v. PACE Int’l Union, 551 U.S. 96, 104 (2007); United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 235 (2001).

B. The Decisions Create Massive Upheaval and Irreversible Damage to the Administration of Pension Plans by Religious Ministries

1. Certiorari is additionally warranted because the consequences of the decision below and the Seventh Circuit’s decision in Advocate are not easily undone, if at all. “[P]redictab[ility]” is essential under ERISA. Rush Prudential HMO, Inc. v. Moran, 536 U.S. 355, 379 (2002). Absent this Court’s intervention, however, church plans around the country will be left in a state of massive uncertainty. And plans with participants in the Third and Seventh Circuits may have to overhaul their benefit programs in costly, potentially irreversible ways. For example, religious employers would have to restructure their participation, vesting, and accrual rules to comply with ERISA. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 1052, 1053, 1054. These changes would be complicated enough to accomplish unilaterally—they would create enormous expenses for which these nonprofit organizations have not planned or budgeted. But many participation, vesting, and accrual rules are subject to collective bargaining, and altering them would require breaching existing union contracts and negotiating new ones.

Affected religious employers would also have to revamp investment strategies to eliminate any religious or socially responsible investment criteria that might conflict with ERISA’s prudent-investor standard. Dep’t of Labor, Interpretive Bulletin Relating to the Fiduciary Standard Under ERISA in Considering Economically Targeted Investments, 80 Fed. Reg. 65135 (2015) (explaining that ERISA fiduciaries cannot use socially responsible investment criteria unless the investment is “economically equivalent” to the competing investments that are incompatible with religious or other criteria). Petitioner Saint Peter’s, for example, follows the Socially Responsible Investment Guidelines promulgated by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, and ERISA’s economic equivalence requirement will likely conflict with those guidelines. COA App. 342, 1533.

Defined benefit plans would be forced to begin paying premiums to the PBGC, which could come out of the funds available to provide benefits to plan participants or available for charitable care. 29 U.S.C. § 1301 et seq. The PBGC is massively underfunded and has imposed multiple multi-billion-dollar premium increases in recent years—increases that nonprofits like Saint Peter’s would pay even though its plan is funded at a level above the ERISA guidelines, and is not at risk.¹⁶ Together, the “financial strains” from these changes “may lead to corporate restructurings, layoffs, mergers or bankruptcies.” Mark Casciari & Jennifer Neilsson, Thoughts on Church Plan Status After Kaplan v. Saint Peter’s Healthcare System, ERISA & Employee Benefits Blog, Jan. 13, 2016, <http://goo.gl/ZjwdU8>.

But those costs may pale in comparison to the figures plaintiffs seek in these cases. Saint Peter’s is a relatively small nonprofit hospital with only 478 beds, yet respondent seeks hundreds of millions of dollars in retroactive penalties. Respondent alleges that Saint Peter's owes 4,700 putative class members $110 a day for every day that Saint Peter's did not provide benefit statements or funding notices that the IRS told Saint Peter's it was not required to provide. Complaint, Prayer for Relief, §§ D-F. And respondents seek that amount for each of three separate violations. Id. Stated differently, for just one year, respondents seek more than $550 million in penalties. That amount is more than five times Saint Peter's net assets, and fifty-five times its net cash. COA App. 1542-43. In the Seventh Circuit case, the numbers are in the billions. Pet. for Certiorari, Advocate, No. 16-74, at 22.

Like all sponsors of ERISA-exempt church plans, Saint Peter's is a nonprofit entity. In 2014, it provided $36.2 million in charitable care to the needy, consistent with its religious mission to heal the sick. COA App. 341. Allowing this gotcha litigation to proceed would come at the expense of destitute patients in New Jersey who rely on this free care.

II. The Courts of Appeals Are Divided Over the Scope of the Church Plan Exemption

Certiorari is all the more warranted because the circuits are divided over whether church-affiliated organizations may establish church plans. Contrary to the interpretation adopted by the court below and the Seventh Circuit, the Fourth and Eighth Circuits have concluded that there is no church establishment requirement.

1. In Lown v. Continental Casualty Co., the Fourth Circuit held that "a plan established by a corporation associated with a church can still qualify as a church plan." 238 F.3d at 547. Lown concerned a claim for denial of benefits asserted by a former employee of a Baptist hospital system against the insurer of her long-term disability plan. Id. at 546. The employee initially filed in state court, but the insurer removed, and the Fourth Circuit affirmed federal jurisdiction under ERISA, holding that the plan was not an exempt church plan. Id. at 547-48. The court explained that a plan established by an organization that is not a church “can still qualify as a church plan” if the plan is maintained by a qualifying church-affiliated organization under § 1002(33)(C)(i). Id. at 547. But the plan at issue could not satisfy § 1002(33)(C)(i) because the hospital system had dissociated from the Southern Baptist Convention and therefore was not church-affiliated. Id. at 548.

The Eighth Circuit reached a similar conclusion in Chronister v. Baptist Health, 442 F.3d 648. There, again, the former employee of a Baptist hospital system sued her former employer and the insurer of her long-term disability plan for denial of benefits. Id. at 650. As in Lown, the employee initially filed in state court, but the defendants removed, and the Eighth Circuit found federal jurisdiction under ERISA. Id. at 650-54. Like the Fourth Circuit, the Eighth Circuit recognized that the plan at issue, though not established by a church, would be a church plan if it were maintained by a qualifying church-affiliated organization. Id. at 651-52. But as in Lown, the plan could not meet that requirement because the hospital system had dissociated from the relevant church. Id. at 652.

2. In contrast to these decisions by the Fourth and Eighth Circuits, the Third Circuit below held that ERISA “limit[s] the church plan exemption to only those plans established by a church.” App. 15a. The court candidly acknowledged that in Lown, the Fourth Circuit “came to the ... conclusion” that “entities that are not themselves churches ... can establish exempt church plans.” App. 8a. But the Third Circuit dismissed that conclusion as “dictum.” Id.

The Seventh Circuit’s decision in Stapleton v. Advocate Health Care Network likewise held that a church plan must be established by a church. 817 F.3d at 519. And also like the Third Circuit, the Seventh Circuit did not deny that that holding conflicts with Lown’s statement that “a plan established by a corporation associated with a church can still qualify as a church plan.” Id. at 525-26. Like the Third Circuit, the Seventh Circuit minimized that statement as “dicta,” because the Fourth Circuit “ultimately decided that the exemption did not apply because the hospital was not associated with or controlled by a church.” Id. at 526.

3. The 2-2 split over whether church-affiliated organizations may establish church plans warrants this Court’s review. Contrary to the Third and Seventh Circuits’ statements, the relevant portions of Lown and Chronister were not superfluous dicta. “[I]t is not only the result but also those portions of the opinion necessary to that result by which [courts] are bound.” Seminole Tribe of Florida v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44, 67 (1996). Lown and Chronister only reached the question of whether the entities at issue were associated with a church because the Fourth and Eighth Circuits concluded that church plans need not be established by churches.

Importantly, district courts within the Fourth and Eighth Circuits regard Lown and Chronister as binding, and thus the split over the scope of the church plan exemption is already leading to inconsistent administration of the law across the country. Based on Lown, a district court within the Fourth Circuit recently ruled that ERISA “permits an organization that is ‘controlled by or associated with a church ...’ to establish a ‘church plan.’” Lann v. Trinity Health Corp., No. 14-cv-2237, 2015 WL 6468197, at *1 (D. Md. Feb. 24, 2015); see Transcript of Motion Hearing at 40, id., dkt. 72 (district court explaining that “the Fourth Circuit has pretty much put [a church establishment requirement] to rest”).

A district court within the Eighth Circuit reached the same conclusion based on Chronister, noting that Chronister “voiced no concern as to whether the plan was established ... by a church.” Thorkelson, 764 F. Supp. 2d at 1127. Numerous other district courts have relied on Lown and Chronister in concluding that plans not established by churches may qualify as church plans. E.g., Overall v. Ascension, 23 F. Supp. 3d 816, 827 (E.D. Mich. 2014) (quoting Lown); Ward, 2010 WL 4337821, at *1-2 (discussing Lown and Chronister). But courts within the Third and Seventh Circuits now will be compelled to reach contrary results.

And the circuit split is especially intolerable because many religious organizations operate in multiple states. These organizations are now facing suits in the Seventh or Third Circuits—even where they are headquartered in circuits following the traditional interpretation—and face the possibility of inconsistent judgments.¹⁷ The prospect of circuit courts coming to differing conclusions regarding the same plan, this Court has recognized, is incompatible with ERISA's goal of national uniformity. Conkright v. Frommert, 559 U.S. 506, 520 (2010). Only this Court can resolve the division.

¹⁷ See, e.g., Feather v. SSM Health, No. 16-cv-00393 (S.D. Ill. April 8, 2016) (suit in Seventh Circuit against religious organization headquartered in the Eighth Circuit).

III. ERISA Does Not Require a Church To Establish an Exempt Church Plan

The text, structure, purpose, and history of the church plan exemption, as well as the constitutional avoidance canon, agency deference, and congressional ratification, all point in one direction: church plans need not be established by churches.

1. The text of the church plan exemption unambiguously forecloses a church-establishment requirement. Section 1002(33)(A) provides that “[t]he term ‘church plan’ means a plan established and maintained ... by a church.” Section 1002(33)(C)(i) in turn provides that “a plan established and maintained ... by a church”—i.e., a church plan—“includes a plan maintained by [a qualifying] organization ... controlled by or associated with a church.” Subparagraph C thus defines the phrase “established and maintained ... by a church” to include plans maintained by certain church-affiliated organizations—whether or not they were established by a church. As one district court explained, “if A is exempt and A includes C, then C is also exempt.” Overall, 23 F. Supp. 3d at 828.

Allowing church-affiliated organizations to establish church plans avoids turning the words “established and” in the beginning of subparagraph C(i) into mere surplusage. Had Congress wanted to permit non-church organizations to maintain but not establish church plans, subparagraph C(i) would provide:

“[a] plan ~~established and~~ maintained ... by a church ... includes a plan maintained by [a qualifying church-affiliated] organization.” But that is not what the provision says.

The Third and Seventh Circuits ignored the superfluity their interpretation creates. The decision below instead reasoned that “if Saint Peter’s were right, the church establishment requirement in § 3(33)(A) would be superfluous.” App. 14a; accord Stapleton, 817 F.3d at 523. Not so. Subparagraph A plays the essential role of defining the term “church plan” as “a plan established and maintained ... by a church.” Without that definition, subparagraph C(i)’s explanation of what “[a] plan established and maintained ... by a church includes” would lack a referent. And subparagraph A makes clear that where a plan is maintained by a church itself rather than a qualifying church-affiliated organization, the plan can still be a church plan. Subparagraphs A and C(i) thus provide alternative, complementary ways to qualify as a church plan. Each provision reaches “cases that the other ... does not.” Conn. Nat’l Bank v. Germain, 503 U.S. 249, 253 (1992).

The Third Circuit also relied on the expressio unius canon. App. 15a; see also Stapleton, 817 F.3d at 524. But Congress’s use of “established and maintained” in subparagraph A and the beginning of subparagraph C(i), when juxtaposed with “maintained” in the latter part of C(i), only underscores that plans maintained by qualifying church-affiliated organizations are church plans regardless of whether they were established by churches. The court below observed that ERISA is a “remedial statute” to be “liberally construed” in favor of employees. App. 16a (quotation marks omitted). That hoary canon is “th[e] last redoubt of losing cases,” OWCP v. Newport News Shipbuilding, 514 U.S. 122, 135-36 (1995), and makes particularly little sense where, as here, legislative compromise has led Congress to narrow a comprehensive statute through an express exemption.

The Third Circuit stated that Saint Peter’s “essentially conceded the problem” based on an answer at oral argument regarding a hypothetical statute. App. 14a. The court described a statute offering benefits to any person “who is disabled and a veteran,” which Congress later amends to provide that “a person who is disabled and a veteran includes a person who served in the National Guard.” App. 14a. The court stated that counsel for Saint Peter’s had responded that a nondisabled Guardsman would not be entitled to receive benefits because “only the second of the two conditions was satisfied.” App. 14a. But counsel for Saint Peter’s said no such thing. Counsel opined that disability was a prerequisite in the hypothetical statute, but did not say that “only the second of the two conditions was satisfied,” and in fact explained that the church plan language was “different.” Oral Argument at 12:46, <http://www2.ca3.uscourts.gov/oralargument/audio/15-1172Kaplanv.SaintPeter's.mp3>. Indeed, the reason counsel gave the answer he did is that the court’s analogy is irredeemably slanted—among other things, it relies on an unstated premise that Congress could not plausibly have intended to offer disability benefits to non-disabled individuals. By contrast here, Congress had good reasons to exempt plans maintained by qualifying church-affiliated organizations regardless of whether they were established by churches. Infra pp.30-32. Further, such plans have received the exemption for over thirty years.

2. The history and purpose of the 1980 amendments reinforce that church plans need not be established by churches. Congress enacted § 1002(33)(C)(i) to resolve doubts regarding plans that were not only maintained but also established by pension boards. As Senator Talmadge explained, the 1974 exemption left uncertain whether such a plan “is established by a church, as it must be [under the 1974 statute], or by a pension board”—i.e., an affiliated organization that is not itself the church. 125 Cong. Rec. 10,052 (emphasis added). Section 1002(33)(C)(i) answers that question by declaring that a “plan maintained by a pension board” or the like “is a church plan,” 126 Cong. Rec. 20,245 (1980) (emphasis added), whether established by a church or not. Accord 124 Cong. Rec. 12,107 (1978) (“A plan or program funded or administered through a pension board ... will be considered a church plan”).

Nothing in the history or purpose of the 1980 amendments supports a church-establishment requirement. The amendments indisputably permit church plans to cover employees of church-affiliated organizations, 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(ii)-(iii), and to be maintained by church-affiliated organizations, id. § 1002(33)(C)(i). Congress had no reason to make church plan status turn on whether it is the church or the church-affiliated organization that established the plan. In many denominations, enlisting a specific church to establish a plan would be impossible. Infra pp.30-31. A church-establishment requirement would only needlessly burden churches and their affiliated organizations, divert money from their religious mission, and offer no added protection to employees—many of whom would join the plan long after establishment. Tying church plan status to the maintaining organization alone was eminently “sensible,” since “the status of the entity which currently maintains a particular pension plan bears more relation to Congress’ goals in enacting ERISA and its various exemptions, than does the status of the entity which established the plan.” Rose v. Long Island R.R. Pension Plan, 828 F.2d 910, 920 (2d Cir. 1987).

The Third Circuit fundamentally misread the legislative history when it suggested that Congress’s goal was solely to “account for plans established by churches but maintained by church agencies.” App. 18a. And though the court stated that the history “overwhelmingly supports the conclusion that Congress did not intend to open up the exemption” to plans established by church agencies, it offered no support for that conclusion. The court pointed to nothing in the legislative history suggesting that Congress favored a church establishment requirement or thought it would serve any useful purpose. It is not even clear what purpose the Third Circuit envisioned, or what “establishing” a church plan actually entails. Unlike the Seventh Circuit, the Third Circuit did not suggest that a church that “established” a plan for employees of an affiliated organization would bear any financial responsibility for the plan. And for good reason. Petitioners are unaware of any authority for such a proposition; nor have respondents cited any. Nor did the Third Circuit suggest such responsibility would be beneficial. Indeed, church agencies or church ministries often have greater resources than individual churches.

The Third Circuit pointed to Congress’s rejection of an earlier version of the 1980 amendment, under which § 1002(33)(C)(i) would have provided that “a plan ‘established and maintained’ by a church includes a plan ‘established and maintained’ by a church agency.” App. 15a (emphasis added). But that earlier version just confirms that from the beginning, Congress was concerned about plans that were not only maintained but also established by pension boards. The obvious problem with the earlier version is that it would have excluded mixed plans established by churches but maintained by affiliated organizations—precisely the plans the Third and Seventh Circuit claim Congress intended to exempt.

3. Allowing church-affiliated organizations to establish church plans avoids grave constitutional doubts. When Congress amended the exemption in 1980, it recognized that the original 1974 exemption discriminated against “congregational” denominations, in which local churches are independent and autonomous. 125 Cong. Rec. 10,052; 124 Cong. Rec. 12,107. Judaism and most Protestant religions are congregational, for example, while the Catholic Church is hierarchical. Then as now, congregational denominations typically formed independent organizations—separate from any individual church, but controlled by or associated with the denomination as a whole—to establish, fund, and administer pension plans for multiple local churches and affiliated agencies. Id. Referring expressly to the 1974 statute’s church-establishment requirement, the amendment’s sponsor explained that the “requirement also points up the inapplicability of the church plan definition to congregational churches.” 125 Cong. Rec. 10,052. The amendment removed the “statutory cloud” over plans affiliated with those denominations. Id.

Requiring church plans to be established by churches themselves thus would resurrect the problem Congress sought to solve, forcing members of congregational denominations (like the petitioner in Advocate) either to radically reorganize their pension programs, or to forgo their exemption from ERISA. But “religious freedom encompasses the power of religious bodies to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine.” Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese for U.S. of Am. & Can. v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 721-22 (1976) (quotation marks and brackets omitted). And “[t]he clearest command of the Establishment Clause is that one religious denomination cannot be officially preferred over another.” Larson v. Valente, 456 U.S. 228, 244 (1982).

The Third Circuit reasoned that religious nonprofits can just “hav[e] a church establish the plan in the first instance.” App. 24a-25a. But no one has suggested that this approach would relieve the hundreds or thousands of church plans that were established long ago. And such a “fix” is not easy for congregational denominations such as Judaism and Baptism. No single synagogue or church can “establish” a plan for the employees of myriad independent local congregations and affiliated organizations.

And for hierarchical and congregational denominations alike, the church establishment requirement would throw the government and religious employers right back into the pre-1980, constitutionally dubious morass, in which government bureaucrats decided on a case-by-case basis whether a particular religious organization was a “church.” Supra pp.4-5. Under that regime, the IRS asked whether the organization was primarily focused on prayer, and concluded that Catholic sisters who are focused on healing the sick do not qualify as the “church”—the very conclusion that prompted Congress to amend the statute. IRS Gen. Couns. Mem. 37,266, 1977 WL 46200, at *4-5. The decision below would resurrect that regime, creating impermissible, and unnecessary, government entanglement with religion. Indeed, many religious organizations facing the current onslaught of church plan lawsuits have contended in the alternative that their plan was in fact established by a church. E.g., Brief for Defendants-Appellants at 43-52, Rollins v. Dignity Health et al., No. 15-15351 (9th Cir. filed July 6, 2015) (arguing that congregations of Catholic women religious established Dignity Health’s plan).

And Congress passed the 1980 amendment because it recognized that “[c]hurch agencies are, in fact, part of the churches” and deserve equal treatment for purposes of ERISA. 125 Cong. Rec. 10,052. By upsetting that principle, the Third and Seventh Circuit decisions raise grave constitutional concerns. “The prospect of church and state litigating in court about what does or does not have religious meaning touches the very core of the constitutional guarantee against religious establishment.” New York v. Cathedral Acad., 434 U.S. 125, 133 (1977). “[I]t is a significant burden on a religious organization to require it, on pain of substantial liability, to predict which of its activities a secular court will consider religious.” Corp. of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints v. Amos, 483 U.S. 327, 336 (1987).

4. The Third and Seventh Circuits seriously erred in casting aside the consistent, longstanding, unanimous interpretation of all three responsible federal agencies. The administrative interpretation “involve[s] the contemporaneous construction of a statute and ... ha[s] been in long use.” Davis v. United States, 495 U.S. 472, 484 (1990). “ERISA is a comprehensive and reticulated statute,” Hughes Aircraft Co. v. Jacobson, 525 U.S. 432, 447 (1999) (quotation marks omitted), and the agencies possess “specialized experience ... on the subtle questions” in this “highly detailed” regulatory scheme, Mead, 533 U.S. at 235; see Beck, 551 U.S. at 104.

It was inappropriate for the Third Circuit to dismiss the agencies’ longstanding view in a scant three paragraphs. App. 22a-23a. And it was especially inappropriate to do so on the inaccurate ground that the IRS’s 1983 memorandum did not “consider the church establishment requirement of § 3(33)(A).” App. 23a. The IRS did “consider” subparagraph A. The agency just disagrees with the Third Circuit, and understands subparagraphs A and C to provide distinct ways of qualifying for the exemption. The IRS correctly understood that Congress’s purpose in the 1980 amendments was to overrule the IRS’s prior views, and interpreted the amended statute consistent with that purpose.

Finally, Congress has ratified the agencies’ position by repeatedly revisiting § 1002(33) and § 414(e) without disturbing the longstanding administrative interpretation. Cottage Sav. Ass’n v. Comm’r, 499 U.S. 554, 561 (1991). Since 1980, Congress has incorporated the church plan definition into more than a dozen provisions across the U.S. Code, and is “presumed to have had knowledge of the interpretation given to the incorporated law.” Lorillard v. Pons, 434 U.S. 575, 581 (1978); supra n.4. Congress also has repeatedly amended ERISA’s definition section in general, and the church plan definition in particular, without altering § 1002(33)(C)(i), which is “persuasive evidence that the [administrative] interpretation is the one intended by Congress.” CFTC v. Schor, 478 U.S. 833, 846 (1986) (quotation marks omitted); supra n.3.

* * *

This Court should either grant this petition and hear it together with the petition in Advocate, or grant Advocate and hold this petition. As the petitioners in Advocate explain, the Court should act now to provide lower courts and religious employers the clarity they desperately require over this important, recurring question of ERISA coverage. While the Court could call for the views of the Solicitor General, all three federal agencies have already weighed in for decades, and the Solicitor General can set forth his views at the merits stage. Unless and until this Court acts, lower courts around the country will be saddled with unnecessary litigation and confusion over ERISA’s church plan exemption. And in the meantime, delaying this Court’s review exposes religious nonprofit ministries all over the country that reasonably relied on settled law to burdensome litigation, devastating uncertainty over their continuing legal obligations, and the risk of adverse judgments imposing crippling liability and forcing potentially irrevocable changes to their pension plans.

CONCLUSION

The petition for certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted.

OPINION OF THE COURT

AMBRO, Circuit Judge

Subsection 4(b)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (“ERISA”) provides an exemption for church plans. These plans need not comply with a host of ERISA provisions, including fiduciary obligations and minimum-funding rules. ERISA § 3(33)(A) defines a church plan as one that is “established and maintained . . . for its employees (or their beneficiaries)” by a tax-exempt church. Subsection 3(33)(C)(i) clarifies that a “plan established and maintained” by a church includes a plan maintained by a qualifying agency of a church. But can a church agency, in addition to maintaining an exempt church plan, also establish such a plan? The District Court concluded that it cannot. We agree. Per the plain text of ERISA, only a church can establish a plan that qualifies for an exemption under § 4(b)(2).¹ Because no church established St. Peter's Healthcare System's retirement plan, we hold that it is ineligible for a church plan exemption.

I. Background

St. Peter's is a non-profit healthcare entity that runs a variety of facilities, including a hospital, and employs over 2,800 people. Though it is not a church, St. Peter's has ties to the Roman Catholic Diocese of Metuchen, New Jersey. For instance, the Bishop of Metuchen appoints all but two members of its Board of Governors. The Bishop also retains veto authority over the Board's actions. Meanwhile, the hospital run by St. Peter's features numerous indicia of the church relationship, including daily Mass and the presence of Catholic devotional pictures and statues throughout the building.

St. Peter's established the retirement plan before us in 1974. It is a non-contributory defined benefit plan, and it covers substantially all employees of St. Peter's hired before July 1, 2010. For more than three decades, St. Peter's operated the plan subject to ERISA and represented to its employees in plan documents and other materials that it was complying with ERISA. Eventually, however, St. Peter's began to consider whether the church plan exemption might apply to its retirement plan. To that end, it filed an application in 2006 with the Internal Revenue Service seeking such an exemption. The Internal Revenue Code borrows its definition of a church plan from ERISA. See 26 U.S.C. § 414(e). Although the application signaled the belief of St. Peter's that it qualified for an ERISA exemption, it continued to pay ERISA-mandated insurance premiums for the retirement plan while the application was pending.

In May 2013, Laurence Kaplan, who worked for St. Peter's from 1985 to 1999, filed a putative class action alleging that St. Peter's failed to comply with various ERISA obligations.² Among other things, the complaint alleged that, in the years after St. Peter's filed the application for a church plan exemption, it did not provide ERISA-compliant summary plan descriptions or pension benefits statements. The most serious allegation was that, as of the end of 2011, the plan was underfunded by more than $70 million.³ In August 2013, while the lawsuit was pending, St. Peter's received a private letter ruling from the IRS affirming the plan's status as an exempt church plan for tax purposes.⁴

St. Peter's moved to dismiss the suit, claiming that it qualified for ERISA's church plan exemption and hence was not required to comply with the provisions Kaplan claimed it had violated. Specifically, St. Peter's argued that the claimed exemption robbed the District

² The complaint also names certain individuals employed by St. Peter's. We refer to these individuals and their employer collectively as "St. Peter's."

⁴ As discussed in Part VII, this private letter ruling does not control our inquiry.

Court of subject matter jurisdiction over the ERISA allegations and in the alternative that the complaint failed to state a claim. The District Court denied the motion after concluding that St. Peter's could not establish an exempt church plan because it is not a church.

In reviewing the District Court's conclusion, we do not write on a blank slate. In the decades following the current church plan definition's enactment in 1980, various courts have assumed that entities that are not themselves churches, but have sufficiently strong ties to churches, can establish exempt church plans. See, e.g., Catholic Charities of Me., Inc. v. City of Portland, 304 F. Supp. 2d 77, 84–85 (D. Me. 2004); Humphrey v. Sisters of St. Francis Health Servs., Inc., 979 F. Supp. 781, 785–86 (N.D. Ind. 1997). The only Circuit to consider the question came to the same conclusion, albeit in a dictum. See Lown v. Cont'l Cas. Co., 238 F.3d 543, 547 (4th Cir. 2001). However, a new wave of litigation, of which this case is a part, has sprung up in the past few years and has presented an argument not previously considered by courts that the actual words of the church plan definition preclude this result.

Riding this new wave, three other courts have agreed with the District Court here that only churches can establish exempt church plans. See Stapleton v. Advocate Health Care Network, 76 F. Supp. 3d 796, 806 (N.D. Ill. 2014); Medina v. Catholic Health Initiatives, No. 13-CV-01249, 2014 WL 3408690, at *9 (D. Colo. July 9, 2014); Rollins v. Dignity Health, 19 F. Supp. 3d 909, 917 (N.D. Cal. 2013). By contrast, three courts have ruled that plans established and maintained by church agencies can qualify for an exemption. See Lann v. Trinity Health Corp., No. 8:14-cv-02237 (D. Md. Feb. 23, 2015) (ECF No. 54 at 1); Medina v. Catholic Health Initiatives, No. 13-CV-01249, 2014 WL 4244012, at *2 (D.Colo. Aug. 26, 2014);⁵ Overall v. Ascension, 23 F. Supp. 3d 816, 829 (E.D. Mich. 2014). The Seventh Circuit heard argument in Stapleton on September 18, 2015, but we are the first Circuit to decide the question in a holding.

II. Jurisdiction and Standard of Review

The District Court had jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1331 and 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(1). St. Peter's filed a motion to dismiss, which the District Court denied. However, the Court permitted St. Peter's to seek leave from us to appeal, and we accepted the interlocutory appeal. We thus have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). Our review of questions of law certified under this provision is plenary. See Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders of Cnty. of Burlington, 621 F.3d 296, 301 (3d Cir. 2010).

III. The Church Plan Exemption

When Congress enacted ERISA in 1974, § 3(33) defined a church plan as follows:

(33)(A) The term “church plan” means (i) a plan established and maintained for its employees by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of the Internal Revenue

⁵ The August 26, 2014 District Court opinion in Medina, written by Judge Blackburn, was on review of the July 9, 2014 opinion, written by Magistrate Judge Mix. Judge Blackburn rejected Magistrate Judge Mix's recommendation. In a later opinion, Judge Blackburn granted summary judgment to the defendants on the basis of a church plan exemption. Medina v. Catholic Health Initiatives, No. 13-CV01249, 2015 WL 8144956, at *14 (D. Colo. Dec. 8, 2015).

Code of 1954, or (ii) a plan described in subparagraph (C).

(C) . . . [A] plan in existence on January 1, 1974, shall be treated as a “church plan” if it is established and maintained by a church or convention or association of churches for its employees and employees of one or more agencies of such church (or convention or association) . . . , and if such church (or convention or association) and each such agency is exempt from tax under section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The first sentence of this subparagraph shall not apply to any plan maintained for employees of an agency with respect to which the plan was not maintained on January 1, 1974. The first sentence of this subparagraph shall not apply with respect to any plan for any plan year beginning after December 31, 1982.

In the years following ERISA’s enactment, this definition led to two problems, both of which are summarized here but discussed in more detail in Part VI below. First, experience showed that many churches established their own plans but relied on church pension boards for plan maintenance. Churches that followed this practice were concerned that their plans might not technically qualify as “established and maintained” by a church. Second, churches wanted the ability to continue to cover the employees of church agencies, such as church hospitals, after the sunset provision in § 3(33)(C) took effect at the end of 1982. Congress addressed both concerns as part of the Multiemployer Pension Plan

Amendments Act of 1980, which amended § 3(33) as follows:

(33)(A) The term “church plan” means a plan established and maintained . . . for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26.

(C) For purposes of [paragraph 33]—

(i) A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.⁶

(ii) The term employee of a church or a convention or association of churches includes—

⁶ Although the statute speaks in terms of churches along with conventions or associations of churches, for ease of reference we refer to them collectively as “churches.” Additionally, we refer to the principal-purpose entities described in § 3(33)(C)(i) interchangeably as “church agencies” or “pension boards.”

- (I) a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, regardless of the source of his compensation;
- (II) an employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches

This new definition solved both of the issues that stemmed from the 1974 definition. Specifically, new § 3(33)(C)(i) unambiguously brought within the exemption plans established by churches but maintained by church pension boards. And new § 3(33)(C)(ii) allowed churches to establish plans that covered church agency employees even after the sunset provision kicked in at the end of 1982.

However, St. Peter's argues that the 1980 amendments also accomplished a third result—annulling the requirement that a church establish a plan in order for it to qualify for an exemption. Under its proposed reading, any plan can qualify for the exemption regardless of who establishes it as long as it meets the maintenance requirements of § 3(33)(C)(i). As noted below, we believe this reading fails to follow the actual words of the provision.

IV. Plain Meaning

We start our review, as we must, with a familiar question: Do the words of the statute have “a plain and unambiguous meaning with regard to the particular dispute in the case”? Barnhart v. Sigmon Coal Co., 534 U.S. 438, 450 (2002) (internal quotation marks omitted). Here, the statute has a plain meaning, and that meaning sets the result.

Subsection 3(33)(A) requires that all exempt plans be established by a church. Prior to 1980, a plan needed to be established and maintained by a church. The 1980 amendments provided an alternate way of meeting the maintenance requirement by allowing plans maintained by church agencies to fall within the exemption. But they did not do away with the requirement that a church establish a plan in the first instance. As the District Court explained, [t]he key to this interpretation is to recognize that subsection [3(33)]A is the gatekeeper to the church plan exemption: although the church plan definition, as defined in subsection A, is expanded by subsection C to include plans maintained by a tax-exempt organization, it nevertheless requires that the plan be established by a church or a convention or association of churches. In other words, if a church does not establish the plan, the inquiry ends there. If, on the other hand, a church establishes the plan, the remaining sections of the church plan definition are triggered.

Kaplan v. Saint Peter's Healthcare Sys., No. 13-2941, 2014 WL 1284854, at *5 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2014) (emphases in original).

St. Peter's responds by arguing that the language of § 3(33)(C)(i), which says that a plan "established and maintained" by a church "includes" a plan "maintained" by a qualifying church agency, means that any plan maintained, even if not established, by such an agency is exempt. This would be persuasive if there were only one requirement—maintenance—for an exemption. But here we have two requirements—establishment and maintenance—and only the latter is expanded by the use of “includes.”

Indeed, St. Peter’s essentially conceded the problem with its reading at oral argument when presented with the following scenario: Congress passes a law that any person who is disabled and a veteran is entitled to free insurance. In the ensuing years, there is a question about whether people who served in the National Guard are veterans for purposes of the statute. To clarify, Congress passes an amendment saying that, for purposes of the provision, “a person who is disabled and a veteran includes a person who served in the National Guard.” Asked if a person who served in the National Guard but is not disabled qualifies to collect free insurance, St. Peter’s responded that such a person does not because only the second of the two conditions was satisfied. This correct response only serves to highlight the fatal flaw in the construction of ERISA advanced by St. Peter’s.

V. Canons of Construction

Various canons of statutory construction add to the problems with the reading proposed by St. Peter’s. First, if St. Peter’s were right, the church establishment requirement in § 3(33)(A) would be superfluous. That is because any plan, regardless of who established it, would be eligible for an exemption as long as it is maintained by an entity that meets the requirements of § 3(33)(C)(i). Creating such superfluous language is a result we attempt to avoid when construing a statute. See Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 173 (1997) (noting that it is a “cardinal principle of statutory construction” to “give effect, if possible, to every clause and word of a statute”) (internal quotation marks omitted). This is particularly so where a contrary reading would “nullif[y]” a statute’s “careful limitation.” Id. Here, Congress carefully limited the church plan exemption to only those plans established by a church. In interpreting the statute, we must give meaning to this limitation.

Second, in cases where Congress “includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another section of the same Act, it is generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion.” Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23 (1983) (internal quotation marks omitted). This canon is known as expressio unius est exclusio alterius (to express one is to exclude others). Here, Congress could have said that a plan “established and maintained” by a church includes a plan “established and maintained” by a church agency. But the final legislation did not say that. Tellingly, however, draft legislation introduced in 1978 by Representative Barber B. Conable, Jr. to amend the Internal Revenue Code had precisely that language. See Kaplan, 2014 WL 1284854, at *9 n.4 (quoting 124 Cong. Rec. 12108 (May 2, 1978)). If Representative Conable’s text had been adopted, it would be quite clear that church establishment of a plan would no longer be a prerequisite for the exemption. But by the time Congress passed the 1980 ERISA amendments, the second “established” was gone.⁷ This deletion from one version to another

“is fairly seen . . . as a deliberate elimination of any possibility” of construing the statute to have the meaning it would have had in the rejected version. Doe v. Chao, 540 U.S. 614, 623 (2004).

Third, we have noted that ERISA is a “remedial” statute that should be “liberally construed in favor of protecting the participants in employee benefit plans.” IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. Barker & Williamson, Inc., 788 F.2d 118, 127 (3d Cir. 1986). As certain of the amici explain, exempt church plans lack many of the protections associated with ERISA. Features that ERISA plans have that church plans need not follow include fiduciary duties and minimum-funding protections. See, e.g., Nat’l Emp’t Lawyers Assoc. & AARP Found. Amicus Br. at 11–19. Excluding plans established by church agencies could take a large number of employees outside the scope of these ERISA protections. For instance, as of 2012 religiously affiliated hospitals accounted for seven of the country’s ten largest non-profit healthcare systems. ACLU & Americans United for Separation of Church and State Amicus Br. at 22. As the District Court noted, construing plans established by church hospitals to be exempt “would achieve quite the opposite” result of the canon directing us to construe exemptions narrowly. Kaplan, 2014 WL 1284854, at *6.

St. Peter’s, for its part, contends that a fourth canon, construing provisions in light of their statutory neighbors, favors its reading. Specifically, it points to ERISA’s governmental plan exemption. ERISA § 3(32), 29 U.S.C § 1002(32), defines an exempt governmental plan to mean “a plan established or maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by the government of any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing.” The provision goes on to say that an exempt governmental plan “includes,” among other options, certain plans to which the Railroad Retirement Act of 1935 applies and certain plans “established and maintained” by Native American tribal governments. St. Peter’s uses this as an example of an instance in which the initial definition of an exempt plan is enlarged through the use of “includes.”

But the governmental plan provision hurts, not helps, St. Peter’s. It shows that Congress considers “established” and “maintained” to be different terms, as either is sufficient for the plans of the federal government and state governments, but both are required for Native American tribal plans. For the church plan exemption before us, Congress did not, as it did with plans of the federal government and state governments, say that either establishment or maintenance is sufficient for ERISA exemption. Rather, Congress explicitly required both (subject to the caveat that the second requirement could be met in the case of a plan maintained by a qualifying church agency).

* * *

In this context, even if St. Peter’s may maintain an exempt church plan,⁸ it cannot establish one. The ⁸ Although we need not decide the issue, we have substantial reservations over whether St. Peter’s can even maintain an exempt plan. Subsection 3(33)(C)(i) requires that if a plan is to be maintained by an organization that is not a church, it must be an organization “the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision plain terms of ERISA only make these exemptions available to plans established in the first instance by churches. Because St. Peter's is not a church, the exemption is unavailable, and it is not entitled to dismissal of Kaplan's complaint on that basis.

VI. Legislative History

Because the terms of the statute are unambiguous, we need go no further. However, because the parties have devoted considerable resources to briefing and arguing the legislative history of the church plan exemption, we turn to it now. Even if the statute were ambiguous and the legislative history bore on our analysis, the result would be the same. Indeed, the legislative history of § 3(33) reinforces our conclusion that the exemption is only available to plans established by churches. Specifically, that history demonstrates that the purposes of the 1980 amendments were to account for plans established by churches but maintained by church agencies (hence the adoption of of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches" In addition, the same subsection requires that the organization be "controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches." Setting aside whether St. Peter's is controlled by or associated with a church (as that depends on disputed facts not properly resolvable at the motion-to-dismiss stage), St. Peter's itself does not appear to meet the principal purpose test, as its principal purpose is the provision of health-care and not the administration or funding of the retirement plan. St. Peter's contends, however, that its Retirement Plan Committee qualifies because the Committee's principal purpose is to maintain the plan. However, this may be insufficient. See Rollins, 19 F. Supp. 3d at 914 ("[T]he statute does not say that the organization may have a subcommittee who deals with plan administration. Rather, the statute dictates that [the] organization itself must have benefits plan administration as its 'principal purpose,' which Dignity plainly does not.").

§ 3(33)(C)(i)) and to extend the sunset provision set to take effect at the end of 1982 (thus the adoption of § 3(33)(C)(ii)).

St. Peter's places great emphasis on the following floor statement from Senator Herman Talmadge, a co-sponsor of the 1980 church plan amendments, regarding the purpose of the 1980 language:

Church agencies are essential to the churches' mission. They are for the sick and needy and disseminate religious instruction. They are, in fact, part of the churches. As a practical matter, it is doubtful that the agency plans would survive subjection to ERISA. There is an essential difference between the plans of business[es] and the plans of church institutions. If a business incurs increased plan maintenance costs, it merely passes these on to the consumer. The incomes of most church agencies, on the other hand, are dependent solely upon tithes and other offerings. There is virtually no way for them to compensate for the additional costs of complying with ERISA. The churches fear that many of the agencies would abandon their plans. We are concerned today that the requirements of ERISA [have] made the maintenance of plans too expensive and demanding even for businesses which have the capacity to absorb additional costs. The impact of ERISA on church agencies would be many times as serious as that on businesses.

⁹ "JA" refers to the parties' joint appendix.

St. Peter's contends that this statement makes clear that Congress was focused on plans established by church agencies. Not so. Rather, the context demonstrates that Senator Talmadge's real concern was the sunset provision set to take effect at the end of 1982. As discussed, the initial definition of a church plan was one "established and maintained for its employees by a church." Existing plans established and maintained by churches were allowed to cover employees of church agencies, but only until the end of 1982. This was not a question of who established and maintained the plans, as only churches could. Instead, the issue was that no exempt plans would be allowed to cover agency employees after 1982 (unless the agency itself qualified as a church). Indeed, Senator Talmadge made the comments above in the context of explaining why churches, after 1982, would need to "divide their plans into two so that one will cover church employees and the other . . . agency employees." Id. Absent an amendment, the plans in the latter category would not qualify for the exemption. That was the real threat to plans covering agency employees.

The reliance of St. Peter's on statements by Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Daniel Halperin during a hearing on the proposed legislation is similarly misplaced. St. Peter's highlights his statement that Treasury's "most serious concern" was that the amendments "would exclude church agencies from the protection of ERISA, and that would mean that if somebody works for a hospital or a school that happens to be affiliated with a church it would be permissible for that plan to provide no retirement benefits unless they work until age 65, for example." Appellants' Addendum at 8. This does not help St. Peter's. Assistant Secretary Halperin was merely pointing out that, if the sunset provision took effect, employees of church agencies could not be included within the then-existing exemption, and a plan covering them would instead be subject to ERISA even if a church itself established it. However, nothing in the statement connotes that plans established by church agencies would be eligible for the exemption.

Similarly, St. Peter's does not benefit from the statement of Senator Jacob Javits, the general sponsor of the legislation in which the 1980 amendments were included. Senator Javits said that he was "not too happy" that the amendments would exempt "those who work for schools and similar institutions which are church-related." JA 1524. Again, this relates to Congress' decision not to allow the sunset provision to take effect.

More to the point, the legislative history demonstrates that the purpose of § 3(33)(C)(i), the statutory provision on which St. Peter's most heavily relies, was to bring explicitly within the exemption plans established by churches but maintained by church agencies known as pension boards. Senator Talmadge explained that "the church plan definition is so narrowly drawn that it does not in many ways even approximate the way church plans are organized or operated." JA 122. He mentioned congregational, as opposed to hierarchical, denominations, noting: "Most church plans of congregational denominations are administered by a pension board. This is usually an organization separately incorporated from, but controlled by, the denomination." Id. There was some confusion as to whether such a structure qualified for an exemption. Id. As Senator Talmadge explained to the Senate Committee on Finance, the amendments dealt with that issue by expanding the definition to include "church plans which rather than being maintained directly by a church are instead maintained by a pension board maintained by a church.” Senate Committee on Finance, Executive Session Minutes, June 12, 1980, at 40.

St. Peter’s, despite a lengthy discussion of legislative history, has not pointed to a single statement showing that Congress, in addition to being concerned about the sunset provision and plans maintained by pension boards (i.e., church agencies), was also focused on plans established by those agencies. Rather, that history overwhelmingly supports the conclusion that Congress did not intend to open up the exemption that broadly.

VII. IRS Rulings

St. Peter’s also seeks to imbue with considerable weight the interpretation that the IRS has given to the church plan definition. As discussed, the Internal Revenue Code gets its definition of church plans from ERISA. Construing the initial 1974 definition, the IRS took the position that healthcare companies with religious missions were not eligible for the church plan exemption because they were not performing sufficiently religious functions. I.R.S. Gen. Couns. Mem. 37,266 (Sept. 22, 1977). Essentially, the IRS’ position was that only church agencies that themselves could qualify as churches could establish exempt plans.

But the IRS changed course in 1983 based on its interpretation of the 1980 amendments and began issuing exemptions to plans that were not established by churches. A 1983 IRS memorandum stated that because “religious orders can now have their employees covered by a church plan without a determination that such orders are churches, [an order’s] nonchurch status is not fatal.” I.R.S. Gen. Couns. Mem. 39,007

(July 1, 1983). According to St. Peter's, the IRS has issued at least several hundred exemptions based on that reasoning. And, as discussed, St. Peter's itself received an exemption from the IRS in 2013, after this lawsuit was filed. St. Peter's also notes that the Department of Labor has issued several exemptions of its own based on the IRS' position.

However, because the IRS' position came in a general counsel memorandum and not as a result of "formal adjudication or notice-and-comment rule-making," its interpretation is owed deference "only to the extent that [it has] the power to persuade." Christensen v. Harris Cnty., 529 U.S. 576, 587 (2000) (internal quotation marks omitted). The IRS' 1983 memorandum lacks the power to persuade because it does not even consider the church establishment requirement of § 3(33)(A). Rather, it skips directly (and inexplicably) to § 3(33)(C). Because the IRS' position is at odds with the statutory text, we owe it no deference.

VIII. Congressional Ratification

St. Peter's also advances a congressional ratification argument. Specifically, it notes that, following the IRS' 1983 memorandum, Congress has incorporated the church plan definition from the 1980 amendments into a variety of other laws. See, e.g., 26 U.S.C. § 4980D(b)(3)(C) (excluding church plans from certain minimum excise taxes imposed on health plans); 15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(c)(14) (excluding church plans from the definition of investment companies under the Investment Company Act of 1940). From this, St. Peter's contends that Congress legislated against the backdrop of the 1983 IRS memorandum and should be presumed to have approved that interpretation when reusing the definition.

It is true as a general matter that when it “adopts a new law incorporating sections of a prior law, Congress normally can be presumed to have had knowledge of the interpretation given to the incorporated law, at least insofar as it affects the new statute.” Lorillard v. Pons, 434 U.S. 575, 581 (1978). However, in Lorillard “Congress exhibited . . . a detailed knowledge of the [statutory] provisions and their . . . interpretation.” Id. St. Peter’s has not shown any evidence that Congress had such a detailed knowledge in this case. Moreover, ratification does not apply where, as is the case here, the statute has a plain meaning that is inconsistent with the proposed interpretation. Dutton v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 5 F.3d 649, 655 (3d Cir. 1993). As a result, ratification cannot salvage things for St. Peter’s.

IX. Free Exercise Clause

Finally, St. Peter’s raises an argument under the First Amendment’s Free Exercise Clause. It asserts that failing to adopt its position would create constitutional “[i]ssues.” Appellants’ Br. at 47. It is not clear whether St. Peter’s is invoking the doctrine of constitutional avoidance or is instead raising a full-blown constitutional challenge. In any event, the argument fails. St. Peter’s bases its constitutional concerns on the premise that, if church agencies cannot establish their own plans, the IRS will be forced, in considering requests for exemptions, to determine on an individualized basis whether particular agencies are performing sufficiently religious functions such that they can themselves qualify as churches. This is the approach the IRS took to agency-established plans prior to the 1983 memorandum. The argument misses the point. Churches and agencies can avoid this inquiry altogether by having a church establish the plan in the first instance. Plans established by churches are explicitly permitted under § 3(33)(C)(ii) to cover agency employees.

St. Peter's has not offered any reason why the First Amendment entitles it to a retirement plan structured using a particular corporate form. The ability of church agencies to have their employees covered by exempt plans is by no means eliminated by our reading. We have merely determined that Congress has required that such coverage come in the form of plans established by churches. Even assuming that St. Peter's has a constitutional right to have its employees covered by an exempt plan, this arrangement does not unduly interfere with that.

Moreover, to the extent that St. Peter's also suggests that Congress cannot validly distinguish between churches and church agencies, that argument is unpersuasive. Indeed, Congress regularly applies provisions to churches without reference to church agencies. See, e.g., 26 U.S.C. § 514(b)(3)(E) (creating a special rule for churches with respect to real property acquired for tax-exempt use); 26 U.S.C. § 170(b)(1)(A)(i) (allowing deductions for charitable contributions to churches). See also Priests for Life v. U.S. Dep't of Health & Human Servs., 772 F.3d 229, 272 (D.C. Cir. 2014), cert. granted, 84 U.S.L.W. 3257 (U.S. Nov. 6, 2015) (No. 14-1453) (describing the distinction between “churches . . . and nonprofit organizations that may have a religious character or affiliation, such as universities and hospitals” as “long-recognized” and “permissible”); Found. of Human Understanding v. United States, 614 F.3d 1383, 1389 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (noting, in context of 26 U.S.C. § 170(b)(1)(A)(i), the “generally accepted principle” that Congress intended to distinguish between churches and other religious organizations).

* * *

In interpreting a statute, we presume that Congress means what it says. Ever since it enacted ERISA in 1974, establishment of a pension plan by a church has been a prerequisite to triggering the exemption from ERISA. Nothing in the 1980 amendments changed that. St. Peter's sought dismissal of the putative class action on the ground that its plan qualifies for the church plan exemption. However, that exemption is unavailable here, as the plan was not established by a church. We therefore affirm the District Court's denial of the motion to dismiss.

SHIPP, District Judge

This matter comes before the Court upon the motions of Defendants Saint Peter's Healthcare System, Ronald C. Rak, Susan Ballestero, and Garrick Stoldt (collectively, "SPHS" or "Defendants") pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6). (Defs.' Br., ECF No. 42-1.) Plaintiff Laurence Kaplan ("Plaintiff" or "Mr. Kaplan") opposed Defendants' motions (Pl.'s Opp'n, ECF No. 48) and Defendants replied (Defs.' Reply, ECF No. 54).

Plaintiff brought this putative class action on behalf of participants and beneficiaries of the Saint Peter's Healthcare System Retirement Plan (the "Plan"), alleging that the Plan is being improperly maintained by SPHS as a "church plan" under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq. This case requires the Court to determine the metes and bounds of ERISA's church plan exemption, as defined in 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33). The Court, in particular, must determine whether a non-profit healthcare corporation may establish and maintain a church plan if it is controlled by or associated with a church. If answered in the affirmative, the Court must then determine whether this interpretation of the church plan definition violates the Establishment Clause of the United States Constitution.

After carefully considering the Parties' submissions and hearing oral argument on March 27, 2014, the Court holds that, as a matter of law, SPHS's employee pension Plan is not a church plan. Therefore, for the reasons set forth below and other good cause shown, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is DENIED.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Overview of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act

In 1974, Congress passed ERISA, which "is a comprehensive statute designed to promote the interests of employees and their beneficiaries in employee benefit plans." Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 463 U.S. 85, 90 (1983). It is a federal law that regulates private industry pension plans, retirement plans, profit-sharing plans and health insurance coverage. For such plans, ERISA establishes rules and minimum standards that are meant to protect plan participants. Nothing in ERISA mandates employers to create these plans; it only sets the standards for those that choose to establish them.

In alignment with its purpose, ERISA “seek[s] to ensure that employees will not be left empty handed once employers have guaranteed them certain benefits.” Lockheed Corp. v. Spink, 517 U.S. 882, 887 (1996). “To increase the chances that employers will be able to honor their benefits commitments—that is, to guard against the possibility of bankrupt pension funds—Congress incorporated several key measures into ERISA.” Id. These measures include, among other things, minimum funding and vesting requirements for all ERISA covered plans and rules concerning reporting, disclosures, and fiduciary responsibilities. See, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 1082.

Although private sector employee benefit plans typically come under ERISA’s purview, there are limited exemptions. One such exemption is the church plan. Church plans were exempted from ERISA because the examination of a church’s books by the government might be regarded as “an unjustified invasion of the confidential relationship that is believed to be appropriate with regard to churches and their religious activities.” Report of Senate Finance Comm., No. 93-383 (Aug. 21, 1973). As a result, a church plan is exempt from ERISA’s requirements unless an election is made under the Internal Revenue Code (“IRC”), 26 U.S.C. § 410(d). 29 U.S.C. § 1003(b)(2).

B. The Plan

SPHS is a non-profit healthcare corporation headquartered in New Brunswick, New Jersey. (Compl., ECF No. 1, ¶¶ 25, 44.) According to Plaintiff, SPHS does not receive funding from the Catholic Church or other religious entities but, instead, relies on revenue bonds to raise money. (Id. ¶¶ 47, 49, 85.) SPHS owns Saint Peter’s University Hospital and Saint Peter’s Health and Management Services Corporation, among other companies. (Id. ¶ 44.) SPHS employs over 2,800 people and, in 1974, established the Plan, which is a non-contributory defined benefit pension plan. (Id. ¶¶ 25, 45, 56, 68; see also id. ¶¶ 61-62, 66-67, 70-72.) For over thirty years, the Plan was operated as an ERISA plan—meaning, it complied with ERISA’s requirements regarding funding, reporting, and insurance premiums paid to the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation (“PBGC”)—and represented such to its employees via Plan documents and other written materials. (Id. ¶¶ 56-57.)

In 2006, during the rise of the nationwide economic downturn, SPHS “concluded that [its Plan] was a church plan” and proceeded to file an application for church-plan status with the Internal Revenue Service (“IRS”). (Id. ¶ 58.) Meanwhile, SPHS continued to pay insurance premiums to PBGC as an ERISA plan. (Id.) Notwithstanding its IRS application, SPHS waited until November 2011 to notify its employees of its application for church-plan status. (Id. ¶ 59.) On August 14, 2013, in a private letter ruling, the IRS concluded that SPHS’s Plan is a church plan as defined in ERISA.¹ (Stoldt Supplemental Cert., ECF No. 45-1, Ex. A.)

C. Plaintiff’s Grievance

Mr. Kaplan is one of many current or former employees of SPHS purportedly affected by SPHS’s

alleged conversion of its Plan from an ERISA plan to a church plan, exempt from ERISA. (Compl. ¶ 24.) Mr. Kaplan worked for SPHS from 1985-1999. (Id.) He is a participant in the Plan maintained by SPHS because he is or will be eligible for pension benefits under the Plan. (Id.) Mr. Kaplan brings this action, pursuant to Rule 23(b)(1) and (b)(2), on behalf of himself and others who are participants or beneficiaries of “any Plan operated or claimed by [SPHS] to be a [c]hurch [p]lan as of [May 7, 2013,]” the date of the Complaint. (Id. ¶ 95.)

Plaintiff’s principal grievance is that SPHS is improperly maintaining its Plan to the detriment of its employees. (Id. ¶ 2.) Strictly speaking, he alleges that SPHS is employing church-plan status to evade ERISA’s various requirements including underfunding the Plan by over $70 million. (Id. ¶¶ 14, 65.) Mr. Kaplan’s concerns are manifested in his eight-count Complaint, alleging various ERISA violations including violations of ERISA’s requirements for reporting and disclosure, minimum funding, establishment of a trust, and for breach of fiduciary duties. He seeks, among other things, an order declaring that the Plan is not a church plan exempt from ERISA or, in the alternative, that the church plan exemption, as claimed by SPHS, is an unconstitutional accommodation under the Establishment Clause.²

II. DISCUSSION

Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiff’s claims on two grounds: (1) lack of subject matter jurisdiction, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1), for Plaintiff’s claims arising under ERISA; and (2) failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), regarding Plaintiff's Establishment Clause claim. The Court will address each ground, in turn.

A. The Court Has Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Plaintiff's ERISA Claims

Before proceeding to review the merits of a case, the Court has a duty to assure itself that it has subject matter jurisdiction. Plaintiff alleges that the Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 1132(e)(1) for his claims brought under Title I of ERISA and 28 U.S.C. § 1331 based on a federal question. (Compl. ¶ 19.) Defendants do not dispute the Court's federal question jurisdiction as to Plaintiff's constitutional claim, but instead challenge subject matter jurisdiction of Plaintiff's ERISA claims. (Defs.' Br. 14.)

A defendant may challenge the court's subject matter jurisdiction with either a facial or factual attack. See Gould Elecs. Inc. v. United States, 220 F.3d 169, 176 (3d Cir. 2000), modified by Simon v. United States, 341 F.3d 193, 195 (3d Cir. 2003). Defendants have launched a factual attack, appending various extrinsic certifications and exhibits to their motion. (See ECF No. 42.) The extrinsic documents purportedly support their position that SPHS's Plan is a church plan exempt from ERISA and, therefore, outside of this Court's subject matter jurisdiction. (See Defs.' Br. 14-33.)

As amended in 1980, the current definition of a church plan provides, in pertinent part:

(A) The term "church plan" means a plan established and maintained (to the extent required in clause (ii) of subparagraph (B)) for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26.

* * * *

(C) For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

(ii) The term employee of a church or a convention or association of churches includes—

(I) a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, regardless of the source of his compensation;

(II) an employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches; and

(III) an individual described in clause (v).

(iii) A church or a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 shall be deemed the employer of any individual included as an employee under clause (ii).

(iv) An organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, is associated with a church or a convention or association of churches if it shares common religious bonds and convictions with that church or convention or association of churches.

29 U.S.C. § 1002(33).³

1. Parties' Positions

According to SPHS, its Plan is a church plan exempt from ERISA for two primary reasons: (1) because SPHS and its Retirement Plan Committee, charged with maintenance of the Plan, are controlled by and associated with the Roman Catholic Church, as outlined under § 1002(33)(C)(i); and (2) because SPHS's employees are considered employees of the Roman Catholic Church under § 1002(33)(C)(ii)(II). (Defs.' Br. 1, 21.)

At the base of SPHS's factual assertions, however, is a significant legal one: that a pension plan established and maintained by a tax exempt corporation controlled by or associated with a church is a church plan. (Defs.' Br. 15.) Plaintiff not only disputes Defendants' factual assertions, but his interpretation of the church plan definition differs in that he reads the definition as allowing only a church or a convention or association of churches—which SPHS is not—to establish and maintain a church plan. (Pl.’s Opp’n 1-2.) Despite their different interpretations of the church plan definition, neither party asserts that the definition is ambiguous. (See Defs.’ Br. 17; Pl.’s Opp’n 10-11.)

The Parties’ dispute is one centered on, and resolved by, the statutory construction of ERISA’s church plan definition, to which the Court now turns.

2. SPHS’s Plan is Not a Church Plan

When interpreting a statute, a court “must give effect to the unambiguously expressed intent of Congress.” Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-43 (1984). To ascertain Congress’ intent, the Court “begin[s] with the language of the statute. The first step ‘is to determine whether the language at issue has a plain and unambiguous meaning with regard to the particular dispute in the case.’” Barnhart v. Sigmon Coal Co., Inc., 534 U.S. 438, 450 (2002) (quoting Robinson v. Shell Oil Co., 519 U.S. 337, 340 (1997)); accord United States v. Cooper, 396 F.3d 308, 310 (3d Cir. 2005). Where the text provides a clear answer to the interpretive question, the analysis ends there as well. Cooper, 396 F.3d at 310 (citing Steele v. Blackman, 236 F.3d 130, 133 (3d Cir. 2001)). “In all events, it is not [the Court’s] task to assess the consequences of each approach and adopt the one that produces the least mischief. [The Court’s] charge is to give effect to the law Congress enacted.” Lewis v. City of Chicago, 560 U.S. 205, 217 (2010).

As previously stated, the interpretive question here is whether a non-profit entity, purportedly controlled by or associated with a church, may both establish and maintain a church plan. Based on the plain text of the statute, the simple answer is no. Starting with subsection A, it is clear that Congress intended for a church plan—first and foremost—to be established by a church. Once the church establishes the plan, the church must also maintain it. From these two requirements, a church plan is born—hence, “[t]he term ‘church plan’ means a plan established and maintained . . . by a church or by a convention or association of churches . . .” 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(A) (emphasis added). However, in subsection C(i), Congress expanded the maintenance requirement outlined in subsection A: a church plan, as defined in subsection A, includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(i) (emphasis added). Put differently, Congress has explicitly provided two ways to fall within the church plan exemption: (1) a plan established and maintained by a church, or (2) a plan established by a church and maintained by a tax-exempt organization, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of the plan, that is either controlled by or associated with a church. Once a church plan is established in one of these ways, subsection C(ii) delineates what individuals may participate in the church plan as employees of the church.

The key to this interpretation is to recognize that subsection A is the gatekeeper to the church plan exemption: although the church plan definition, as defined in subsection A, is expanded by subsection C to include plans maintained by a tax-exempt organization, it nevertheless requires that the plan be established by a church or a convention or association of churches. In other words, if a church does not establish the plan, the inquiry ends there. If, on the other hand, a church establishes the plan, the remaining sections of the church plan definition are triggered.

b) SPHS's Interpretation

Defendants, nevertheless, argue that the definition does not mean what it says. To bolster its more general argument that a tax-exempt organization controlled by or associated with a church may establish and maintain a church plan, SPHS grasps upon two specific propositions. SPHS first highlights the fact that ERISA does not define the term “church.” (Defs.’ Br. 17.) To fill this statutory crevice, SPHS provides its own definition to show that its Plan meets the requirements of the church plan exemption. According to SPHS, reading subsection C “into” subsection A, “a ‘church’ for the purposes of the statute is broader than simply an institution for religious worship[.]” (Id. at 18.) Specifically, SPHS asserts that subsection C expands the definition of a church to include “any federally tax exempt corporation controlled by or in association with such an institution that establishes and maintains a retirement plan for its employees, and a retirement plan established by the corporation for those employees is a church plan.” (Id.) At oral argument, Defendants further justified their interpretation by contending that Plaintiff's interpretation would render the term "includes" in subsection C(i) and the entirety of subsection C meaningless. (Mar. 27, 2014 Rough Tr. 22:11-24; see also Defs.' Resp. to Pl.'s 2d Notice, ECF No. 59, 3-5.) SPHS's interpretation, however, is contrary to the plain text and the Court will address each of Defendant's arguments, in turn.

First, when interpreting a statute, the Court must be guided by the principle that Congress says what it means and means what it says. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Union Planters Bank, N.A., 530 U.S. 1, 6 (2000); In re Phila. Newspapers, LLC, 599 F.3d 298, 304 (3d Cir. 2010). It is no secret that ERISA is an "enormously complex and detailed statute[.]" Conkright v. Frommert, 559 U.S. 506, 509 (2010). As such, the Court concludes that Congress was cautious in crafting the definition of a church plan and therefore the definition means what it says—that a church plan must, from the outset, be established by a church and can be maintained by an organization controlled by or associated with a church. In essence, Defendants urge the Court to read subsection C(i) as follows:

A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan established and maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise . . . if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

Congress could have added this language to subsection C, but decidedly did not. To be sure, Congress made the above distinction in the definition of a “governmental plan,” which is the definition immediately preceding the church plan definition. The governmental plan definition states, in pertinent part:

The term “governmental plan” means a plan established or maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by the government of any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing The term “governmental plan” includes a plan which is established and maintained by an Indian tribal government . . . a subdivision of an Indian tribal government . . . or an agency or instrumentality of either[.]

29 U.S.C. § 1002(32) (emphasis added).

Second, Defendants’ interpretation ignores—and renders superfluous—Section A which requires a church to establish a church plan. See Alexander v. Riga, 208 F.3d 419, 430 (3d Cir. 2000) (when interpreting a statute, a court must give effect, if possible, to every word and clause of a statute). If the Court were to accept SPHS’s interpretation, any tax-exempt organization can establish its own pension plan, maintain it, and then employ the church plan exemption by purporting to be controlled by or associated with a church. In this context, a tax-exempt organization itself would have to be considered a church under the statute because a church is the only entity allowed to establish a church plan. Defendants’ contention in this regard is unreasonable. The Court cannot conclude that Congress intended to create this slippery slope, especially considering that the point of enacting ERISA was to promote the interest of employees and their beneficiaries. Opening the door to expand the church plan exemption to this extent would place more employees at risk of having insufficient benefits upon retirement. What must be kept in mind is that ERISA is a remedial statute, so any exemptions included thereunder should be construed narrowly. See Rodriguez v. Compass Shipping Co., 451 U.S. 596, 614 n.33 (1981). Defendants' interpretation would achieve quite the opposite.

On the other hand, Defendants insist that Plaintiff's and the Court's interpretation of the definition would render the term "includes," as provided in subsection C(i), meaningless. The Court disagrees. The Court's interpretation expands the definition of a church plan for the limited purpose of allowing a plan that is first established by a church to include a plan that is maintained by a tax-exempt organization. The term "includes" merely provides an alternative to the maintenance requirement but does not eliminate the establishment requirement. In addition, the Court's interpretation does not render the entire subsection of C meaningless. As stated above, after a church establishes a plan, subsection C provides clarity as to who can participate in the church's plan and the requirements for a tax-exempt organization, other than the church, to maintain a church-established plan. Defendants' interpretation would expand the church plan definition to untenable bounds and, in the process, change the plain text of the statute.

Third, when examining the text of a statute, the Court must interpret statutory words as taking their ordinary, common meaning unless otherwise defined by Congress. See Perrin v. United States, 444 U.S. 37, 42 (1979). The Court does not venture to define “church” but, needless to say, the Court cannot conclude that Congress intended for a tax-exempt agency, controlled by or associated with a church, to be considered a church under the statute. Despite SPHS’s own definition of a church, it does not appear to be arguing that it is a church. (See Defs.’ Br. 18; see also Defs.’ Resp. to Pl.’s 2d Notice 5.) This became evident at oral argument when it seemingly retreated from its original position. (Mar. 27, 2014 Rough Tr. 24:5-7.)

Finally, the Court’s reading of the statute is consonant with the two appellate decisions that have addressed the church plan definition. In both Lown v. Continental Casualty Co., 238 F.3d 543 (4th Cir. 2001) and Chronister v. Baptist Health, 442 F.3d 648 (8th Cir. 2006), the Fourth and Eighth Circuits concluded that the entities at issue did not meet the definition of a church plan based on factual findings. See Lown, 238 F.3d at 548 (considering whether a disability plan was a church plan, but finding that Baptist Healthcare and the South Carolina Baptist Convention mutually ended their affiliation); Chronister, 442 F.3d at 652 (finding that Baptist Health severed its ties with the Arkansas Baptist State Convention in 1966). The courts were not faced with the legal issue present before the Court and therefore did not need to address it.

Furthermore, the case law relied upon by Defendants is unpersuasive. Defendants primarily rely on Thorkelson v. Publishing House of Evangelical Lutheran Church, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1119 (D. Minn. 2011), for the proposition that a tax-exempt organization controlled by or associated with a church can establish and maintain a church plan. (Defs.’ Br. 23, 30.) In Thorkelson, plaintiffs made the same arguments as Mr. Kaplan—that the benefit plan for defendant Augsburg Fortress Publishers (“AFP”), a non-profit publisher for the Lutheran Church, was not a church plan because it was sponsored by AFP. Thorkelson, 764 F. Supp. 2d at 1125. Interpreting the church plan definition, the court concluded that AFP’s plan was a church plan exempt from ERISA. Id. at 1126. Even though plaintiff conceded that AFP was controlled by the Lutheran Church, the court focused its statutory analysis on whether the plan was sponsored by a tax-exempt entity that is controlled by or associated with a church. Id. at 1126-27. However, its interpretation did not apply § 1002(33)(A), which requires—from the outset—a plan to be established by a church. The court also noted that defendants’ position was supported by case law and agency decisions of the IRS and Department of Labor (“DOL”). Id. at 1125.

On the other hand, a recent decision from the Northern District of California is more persuasive. In Rollins v. Dignity Health, No. C13-1450 TEH, 2013 WL 6512682 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2013), plaintiff brought similar ERISA claims as Mr. Kaplan, alleging that defendant’s pension plan was not a church plan because it was sponsored by a non-profit healthcare organization and not a church. Rollins, 2013 WL 6512682, at *2. After a thorough analysis of the statutory text, the court concluded that notwithstanding section C, which permits a valid church plan to be maintained by some church-affiliated organizations, section A still requires that a church establish a church plan. Because the statute states that a church plan may only be established “by a church or by a convention or association of churches,” only a church or a convention or association of churches may establish a church plan. 29 U.S.C. 1002(33)(A). Dignity’s effort to expand the scope of the church plan exemption to any organization maintained by a church-associated organization stretches the statutory text beyond its logical ends.

Id. at *5. The Rollins court’s interpretation of the church plan definition is in accord with this Court’s decision.

Defendants reiterate that Thorkelson is in alignment with thirty years of judicial decisions, but none of these previous decisions undertook a detailed statutory analysis of the church plan definition as Judge Henderson did in Rollins. Instead, these prior decisions often bypassed subsection A of the definition and immediately applied subsection C(i), made conflicting determinations regarding the limitations of C(i), or even misstated the text of subsection C(i). See, e.g., Rhinehart v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., No. C08-5486 RBL, 2009 WL 995715, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 14, 2009) (misquoting subsection A as providing that a church plan means a plan “established or maintained” by a church and concluding that subsection C(i) does not expand the definition of a church plan) (emphasis added); Catholic Charities of Maine, Inc. v. City of Portland, 304 F. Supp. 2d 77, 85 (D. Me. 2004) (adding words to the plain text when it concluded that “ERISA brings a plan established or maintained by a non-church organization within the general definition of ‘church plan’ if that organization is ‘controlled by’ or ‘associated with’ a church”) (emphasis added); Friend v. Ancillia Sys. Inc., 68 F. Supp. 2d 969, 973 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (pre-Lown decision considering whether a church plan is required to be maintained by an organization, the principal purpose of which is administering or funding the plan, and holding that this was not a requirement).

The Court finds that Plaintiff's interpretation of the church plan definition provides a common sense reading of the statute based on its plain text. Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons, which are dispositive, the Court finds, as a matter of law, that SPHS's Plan is not a church plan and that the Court has subject matter jurisdiction of Plaintiff's ERISA claims.

3. Legislative History Does Not Justify a Departure from the Plain Text

Both Parties seek refuge in the legislative history by pointing particularly to comments made on the congressional floor that purportedly support their reading of the statute. However, "where the text of a statute is unambiguous, the statute should be enforced as written and '[o]nly the most extraordinary showing of contrary intentions in the legislative history will justify a departure from that language.'" In re Phila. Newspapers, LLC, 599 F.3d at 314 (quoting United States v. Albertini, 472 U.S. 675, 680 (1985)). The Parties have not made such a showing here. See Estate of Arrington v. Michael, 738 F.3d 599, 606 (3d Cir. 2013) ("[S]elective invocation of fragments of the floor debate is an object lesson in the perils of appealing to . . . legislative history as a guide to statutory meaning The law is what Congress enacts, not what its members say on the floor.") (citations omitted).⁴

4. The IRS Private Letter Ruling Is Contrary to the Plain Text

Were the Court to conclude that the church plan definition is ambiguous as to what entity can establish and maintain a church plan, the Court could defer to an agency's reasonable interpretation of the statute. See Chevron, 467 U.S. at 842-43. Although the Court has determined Congress' intent based on the plain text, it seems appropriate to discuss the DOL and IRS private letter rulings; not only because SPHS has received an IRS private letter ruling on this issue, but because these rulings seem to be somewhat responsible for the overbroad application of the church plan exemption. See Gen. Counsel Mem. ("GCM") 39007 (July 1, 1983) (post-amendment interpretation of the church plan definition, which concluded that plans established and maintained by two Catholic orders—not churches—that operated nursing homes and hospitals, were church plans). Since the 1983 GCM, dozens of IRS private letter rulings have held that a church-related agency can establish its own church plan. The DOL has also issued advisory opinions on church-related agencies, concluding that their plans are church plans. See, e.g., Advisory Op. 94-04A (Feb. 17, 1994) (interpreting the church plan definition as follows: "In accordance with Section 3(33)(C)(iii) . . .

language of what is now subsection C(i) read, in pertinent part: "A plan established and maintained by a church . . . shall include a plan established and maintained by an organization . . ." 124 Cong. Rec. 12108 (May 2, 1978) (emphasis added). The subsequent 1980 amendment of the church plan definition excluded the word "established" from subsection C(i). See, e.g., Doe v. Chao, 540 U.S. 614, 622 (2004) (acknowledging that "drafting history show[s] that Congress cut the very language in the bill that would have authorized any presumed damages").

the Church is deemed the employer of these individuals for purposes of the church plan definition in section 3(33); and the Church, as employer, is deemed to have established and to maintain the Plans.”) (emphasis added).

Defendants argue that, “though not binding on the Courts, [these rulings] are entitled to deference in accord with their persuasive power” to the extent that they are reasonable and consistent with the text and legislative history. (Defs.’ Br. 20; see also id. at 21-22.) In response, Plaintiff asserts that the agency determinations should not be given deference because they are inconsistent, unpersuasive, and interpret the statute differently than the courts. (Pl.’s Opp’n 15-16.) Defendants concede that courts and agencies interpret the church plan definition differently, but maintain that agency decisions are entitled to deference. (Defs.’ Reply 5-6.) Moreover, Defendants assert that congressional silence regarding the church plan definition gives the agency decisions the force of law. (Mar. 27, 2014 Rough Tr. 6:5-10; 18:6-10.)

Although SPHS has received a private letter ruling, the Court cannot give it deference for several reasons. As an initial matter, the ruling conflicts with the plain text of the statute and is therefore unreasonable. “The judiciary is the final authority on issues of statutory construction and must reject administrative constructions which are contrary to clear congressional intent.” See Chevron, 467 U.S. at 843 n.9. Furthermore, the IRS private letter ruling is conclusory, lacking any statutory analysis, and cannot be used as precedent because the ruling was issued in a non-adversarial setting based on information supplied by SPHS. See 26 U.S.C. § 6110(k)(3); see also Christensen v. Harris Cnty., 529 U.S. 576, 586-87 (2000) (pointing out that an agency’s opinion letters, policy statements, agency manuals, and enforcement guidelines – unlike regulations adopted through “formal adjudication or notice-and-comment rulemaking” – “do not warrant Chevron-style deference”). In addition, courts have long held that congressional silence, alone, in the wake of administrative rulings does not give the rulings the force of law. See Brown v. Gardner, 513 U.S. 115, 121-22 (1994) (“As we have recently made clear, congressional silence ‘lacks persuasive significance,’ . . . particularly where administrative regulations are inconsistent with the controlling statute”) (citations and internal quotations omitted); Aaron v. SEC, 446 U.S. 680, 694 n.11 (1980) (“[I]t is our view that the failure of Congress to overturn the Commission’s interpretation falls far short of providing a basis to support a construction . . . so clearly at odds with its plain meaning and legislative history.”) (citation omitted); Girouard v. United States, 328 U.S. 61, 69 (1946) (“It is at best treacherous to find in congressional silence alone the adoption of a controlling rule of law.”); cf. Lorillard, Div. of Loew’s Theatres, Inc. v. Pons, 434 U.S. 575, 580-81 (1978) (“Congress is presumed to be aware of an administrative or judicial interpretation of a statute and to adopt that interpretation when it re-enacts a statute without change”) (internal citations omitted) (emphasis added). The church plan definition has not been amended since 1980 and Defendants cannot now use congressional silence to turn agency rulings into law.⁵

For the reasons stated above, Defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) is denied.⁶

B. Violation of Establishment Clause of First Amendment

Plaintiff's Establishment Clause claim is based upon the Court finding that SPHS's Plan is a church plan as defined in ERISA. (Pl.'s Opp'n 32.) Because the Court finds that, as a matter of law, SPHS's Plan is not a church plan, it is unnecessary for the Court to address this claim. As such, Defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) is denied.

regulations to define terms within the ERISA church plan definition. Compare Christopher v. Smithkline Beecham Corp., 132 S. Ct. 2156, 2162, 2165 (2012) (noting that Congress delegated authority to the DOL to issue regulations and define the term "outside salesman" in the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), which states, in part, "any employee employed . . . in the capacity of an outside salesman (as such terms are defined and delimited from time to time by regulations of the Secretary . . .") (emphasis added), with Bellas v. CBS, Inc., 221 F.3d 517, 524, 532 (3d Cir. 2000) (stating that Congress contemplated the Treasury Department setting forth the definition of "retirement-type subsidy" in ERISA, but nevertheless holding that the IRS's interpretation was at odds with the statute and the legislative history) (citing ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1054(g)(2)(A), which states, in part, "a plan amendment which has the effect of . . . eliminating or reducing . . . a retirement-type subsidy (as defined in regulations) . . .") (emphasis added).

⁶ Because the Court finds, as a matter of law, that the Plan is not a church plan, the Court does not reach the merits of Defendants' factual assertions in connection with their Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss or the Parties' dispute regarding whether the church plan exemption is jurisdictional. For the same reason, Plaintiff's Motion to Strike certain certifications and exhibits (ECF No. 47) is denied as moot.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, and other good cause shown, it is hereby ordered that Defendants' Motions to Dismiss pursuant to Rules 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6) are DENIED. An Order will be entered consistent with this Opinion.

MEMORANDUM OPINION

On March 31, 2014, the Court issued an Order denying the motion to dismiss of Defendants Saint Peter's Healthcare System ("SPHS"), Ronald C. Rak, Susan Ballestero, and Garrick Stoldt (collectively, "Defendants"). (March 31 Order, ECF No. 67.) Defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 12(b)(1) and (b)(6) for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and failure to state a claim ultimately presented an issue of first impression in this Circuit: whether a non-profit healthcare corporation, such as SPHS, may establish and maintain a church plan, as defined in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (“ERISA”), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33), if it is controlled by or associated with a church.

Presently before the Court is Defendants’ motion to certify the Court’s March 31 Order for interlocutory appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) and to stay the proceedings pending an appeal to the Third Circuit. (Defs.’ Br., ECF No. 74-1.) Plaintiff Laurence Kaplan opposed the motion (Pl.’s Opp’n, ECF No. 85) and Defendants replied. (Defs.’ Reply, ECF No. 90). The Court has carefully considered the submissions and has decided the motion without oral argument pursuant to Local Civil Rule 78.1. For the following reasons, and other good cause shown, Defendants’ motion is GRANTED.

I. BACKGROUND

The Court detailed Plaintiffs factual allegations giving rise to this action in its Memorandum Opinion accompanying the Court’s March 31 Order and incorporates that background herein. (See Mem. Op. at 2-4, ECF No. 68.)

In its Memorandum Opinion, the Court held that, as a matter of law, SPHS’s Retirement Plan (the “Plan”) is not a church plan exempt from ERISA, solidifying the Court’s subject matter jurisdiction of Plaintiffs ERISA claims. (Id. at 2, 13, 17.) The Court also set forth its reasons for denying Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s ERISA’s claims. After conducting a statutory analysis of ERISA’s church plan definition, the Court concluded that the plain text of the statute “requires—from the outset—a [church] plan to be established by a church.” (Mem. Op. at 12-13.) Because the Plan was established by SPHS, it could not be a church plan as defined under the statute. (Id. at 7-13.)

Defendants also moved to dismiss Plaintiffs constitutional claim alleging that the church plan exemption, as claimed by SPHS, is an unconstitutional accommodation under the Establishment Clause. However, upon concluding that SPHS's Plan is not a church plan, Defendants' motion to dismiss the constitutional claim was rendered moot and denied as such. (Id. at 17; see also March 31 Order, ¶ 2.)

II. DISCUSSION

Defendants now move to certify the Court's March 31 Order for interlocutory appeal and for a stay of proceedings, asserting that the March 31 Order satisfies the three criteria for certification. Moreover, Defendants suggest that the March 31 Order has created "chaos" for "hundreds of institutions across the country" affected by the Court's ruling. (Defs.' Br. 1-2, 16; see also Greenbaum Supp. Cert. Ex. A, ECF No. 75.) Unsurprisingly, Plaintiff disagrees with Defendants' assertions and contends that "[t]his case does not present 'exceptional' circumstances that warrant the disruption of the normal judicial process." (PL's Opp'n 1.)

In this instance, the Court agrees with Defendants. This is an exceptional case warranting certification for interlocutory appeal and, as explained in more detail below, Defendants have met the criteria for a certificate. In granting Defendants' motion, the Court acknowledges the practical implications of its March 31 decision, though it does not agree its ruling created nationwide "chaos."

A. Motion for Interlocutory Appeal

The Court finds that Defendants have established the three elements necessary for the Court to certify its March 31 Order for interlocutory appeal.

As a general rule, a matter may not be appealed to the Third Circuit until final judgment is entered. Nevertheless, in “exceptional cases,” an interlocutory appeal may be proper. Caterpillar Inc. v. Lewis, 519 U.S. 61, 74 (1996). As such, a district court may exercise its discretion to grant leave to file an interlocutory appeal, under § 1292(b), if its order: (1) involves a “controlling question of law”; (2) there is “substantial ground for difference of opinion”; and (3) if appealed immediately, “may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.” 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b); see also Katz v. Carte Blanche Corp., 496 F.2d 747, 754 (3d Cir. 1974). The burden to demonstrate that certification is appropriate lies with the moving party. Orson, Inc. v. Miramax Film Corp., 867 F. Supp. 319, 320 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (citation omitted); see also, e.g., Elec. Mobility Corp. v. Borns Sensors/Controls, Inc., 87 F. Supp. 2d 394, 398 (D.N.J. 2000).

First, the question of whether a non-profit healthcare corporation can establish and maintain a church plan, as defined in ERISA, is a controlling question of law. A question of law is controlling if “an incorrect disposition would constitute reversible error and . . . it is serious to the conduct of the litigation, either practically or legal[ly].” Eisenberger v. Chesapeake Appalachia, LLC, No. 09-cv-1415, 2010 WL 1816646, at *3 (M.D. Pa. May 5, 2010) (citing Katz, 496 F.2d at 755). Indeed, the Court acknowledged that “[t]he Parties’ dispute is one centered on, and resolved by, the statutory construction of ERISA’s church plan definition[.]” (Mem. Op. at 7.) Plaintiff concedes that “the [Court’s] statutory interpretation . . . is dispositive of Plaintiff’s claim that the SPHS Plan is not exempt from ERISA as a church plan[.]” (Pl.’s Opp’n 2.) Nevertheless, he disputes that the interpretive question is a controlling question of law because it would not affect the entire litigation or its outcome. (Pl.'s Opp'n 2, 10-12, 16.) The Court disagrees.

The Court did not reach the issue of whether an exemption from ERISA eliminates the Court's subject matter jurisdiction.¹ However, if the Court's statutory interpretation was incorrect, it would require reversal upon final appeal and likely strip this Court of subject matter jurisdiction of Plaintiffs ERISA claims. Beazer E., Inc. v. The Mead Corp., No. Civ.A.91-408, 2006 WL 2927627, at *2 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 12, 2006) ("The court believes that the fundamental issue of subject matter jurisdiction is one of the clearest examples of a 'controlling question of law' within the meaning of § 1292(b).") (citation omitted); see also Koval v. Wash. Cnty. Redevelopment Auth., 574 F.3d 238, 244 (3d Cir. 2009) (affirming dismissal of complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because the benefits plan at issue was a "government plan" exempt from ERISA).

Second, there is substantial ground for difference of opinion whether a non-profit, tax-exempt organization can establish and maintain a church plan as defined in ERISA. Substantial ground for difference of opinion exists when there is genuine doubt or conflicting precedent as to the correct legal standard. P. Schoenfeld Asset Mgmt. LLC v. Cendant Corp., 161 F. Supp. 2d 355, 360 (D.N.J. 2001). "The clearest evidence of 'substantial grounds for difference of opinion' is where 'there are conflicting interpretations from numerous courts.'" Knopick v. Downey, 963 F. Supp. 2d 378, 398 (M.D. Pa. 2013) (quoting Beazer E., 2006

¹ Although the Court did not reach this issue, the Court of Appeals "may address any issue fairly included within the certified order[.]" Yamaha Motor Corp., U.S.A. v. Calhoun, 516 U.S. 199, 205 (1996).

WL 2927627, at *2). In its Memorandum Opinion, the Court acknowledged and analyzed at length numerous federal court decisions and Internal Revenue Service and Department of Labor advisory opinions, which have—at the very least—presumed that a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation can establish and maintain a church plan. (Mem. Op. at 11-15.) More troubling, however, is that these cases conflict with each other in their analysis (or lack thereof) of the church plan definition. (See id. at 13.) Even if the Court did not consider its March 31 decision as one in conflict with prior decisions, a more recent split has emerged amongst courts that have taken a closer look at the plain text. Compare Overall v. Ascension, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2014 WL 2448492, at *15 (E.D. Mich. May 13, 2014) (“A church plan is a plan that is (1) established by a church or (2) established by an organization that is controlled by or associated with a church.”)², and Medina v. Catholic Health Initiatives, No. 13-cv-01249, 2014 WL 4244012, at *2-3 (D. Colo. Aug. 26, 2014) (rejecting report and recommendation and agreeing with Overall), with Rollins v. Dignity Health, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2013 WL 6512682, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2013) (concluding that “notwithstanding section C, which permits a valid church plan to be maintained by some church-affiliated organizations, ² In support of their motion, Defendants claim that this Court’s “gatekeeper” reasoning has been “refuted” by Overall. (Defs.’ Reply 14.) Although the Court agrees that Overall is in clear conflict with Rollins and this Court’s decision, the Overall court failed to address the absence of the term “establish” in Section C(i) of the church plan definition, which was significant in Rollins and the Court’s March 31 decision. See 29 U.S.C. § 1002(33)(C)(i); Mem. Op. at 9-10; Rollins, 2013 WL 6512682, at *5.

section A still requires that a church establish a church plan”) (emphasis in original).³

Third, a definitive, appellate ruling would materially advance the termination of the litigation. A § 1292(b) certification “materially advances the ultimate termination of the litigation where the interlocutory appeal eliminates: (1) the need for trial; (2) complex issues that would complicate trial; or (3) issues that would make discovery more costly or burdensome.” Bais Yaakov of Spring Valley v. Peterson’s Nelnet, LLC, No. 11-00011, 2013 WL 663301, at *4 (D.N.J. Feb.21, 2013). “Certification is more likely to materially advance the litigation where the appeal occurs early in the litigation, before extensive discovery has taken place and a trial date has been set.” N.J. Prot. & Advocacy, Inc. v. N.J. Dep’t of Educ., No. 07-2978, 2008 WL 4692345, at *3 (D.N.J. Oct. 8, 2008).

Plaintiff disputes that Defendants have met any of the criteria necessary for certification, but his major point of contention is that certification would not materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation. (Pl.’s Opp’n 2, 7.) Specifically, Plaintiff asserts that a reversal would not prevent unnecessary expense and would broaden discovery by adding factual and legal issues. (Id. at 12-15.) To support his assertion, Plaintiff represents that this case could be submitted to the Court within five months after targeted discovery. (Id. at 5.) Defendants assert that discovery will take “two mutually exclusive pathways” and an interlocutory appeal will determine the appropriate path. (Defs.’ Reply 7.) According to Defendants, if the case goes forward in the normal course, then discovery will focus on issues of class certification and the ERISA claims but not on issues of control or association with the Roman Catholic Church. On the other hand, if the March 31 Order is reversed, then there may be additional jurisdictional discovery. (Id. at 7.)

As discussed above, Defendants’ motion concerns a controlling question of law. To that end, “[t]he requirement that an appeal may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation is closely tied to the requirement that the order involve a controlling question of law.” Pub. Interest Research Grp. of N.J., Inc. v. Hercules, Inc., 830 F. Supp. 1549, 1557 (D.N.J. 1993) (citation and internal quotations omitted). An interlocutory appeal would avoid unnecessary expense and will materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation: at most, a reversal of the Court’s decision will likely eliminate the Court’s subject matter jurisdiction of Plaintiff’s ERISA claims altogether and, at the very least, will eliminate the necessity for certain avenues of discovery in the manner Defendants have described. Furthermore, this case is still in the early stages of litigation, where the parties have not participated in a Rule 16 conference or engaged in any discovery. Finally, if the Court is reversed, deciding the Establishment Clause issue would not require discovery because it is a pure question of law.

Plaintiff relies on the Rollins court's denial of Dignity Health's motion for interlocutory appeal. See Rollins v. Dignity Health, No. 13-cv-01450-TEH, 2014 WL 1048637 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 2014). Judge Henderson's decision is distinguishable from the instant matter because of its procedural posture. The Rollins court's initial decision regarding the church plan definition was decided on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, not for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Indeed, Judge Henderson made this distinction in his explanation for denying Dignity Health's motion for interlocutory appeal. Id. at *2 ("a different ruling as to whether a court has jurisdiction . . . could invalidate an entire district court proceeding. In contrast, the matter at issue here is not of such high stakes"). Judge Henderson's decision, therefore, is not persuasive on this issue.

In sum, this is the rare case where an interlocutory appeal is appropriate. Ultimately, of course, that is not the Court's decision to make, as the Third Circuit may disagree and deny certification. Defendants, nevertheless, should at least have the opportunity to make their request to the Court of Appeals, and by certifying, the Court grants them leave to do so.

B. Motion to Stay

Defendants move to stay the proceedings pending a determination by the Third Circuit and Plaintiff opposes. (Defs.' Br. 18-19; Pl.'s Opp'n 2, 25-27.) Each court has the inherent power to control its own docket to promote fair and efficient adjudication. Landis v. N. Am. Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254 (1936); Rolo v. Gen. Dev. Corp., 949 F.2d 695, 702 (3d Cir. 1991). To promote fair and efficient adjudication in this case, the Court will stay this action pending appeal from the March 31 Order. To be clear, however, a stay is granted only until the Third Circuit decides whether it will permit an appeal to be taken.⁴

III. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, and other good cause shown, it is hereby ordered that Defendants' motion to certify the Court's March 31 Order for interlocutory appeal and to stay proceedings pending appeal is GRANTED. An Order will be entered consistent with this Opinion.

(i) A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

(ii) The term employee of a church or a convention or association of churches includes—

(I) a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, regardless of the source of his compensation;

(II) an employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 of title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches; and

(III) an individual described in clause (v).

(iii) A church or a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of title 26 shall be deemed the employer of any individual included as an employee under clause (ii).

(iv) An organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, is associated with a church or a convention or association of churches if it shares common religious bonds and convictions with that church or convention or association of churches.

(v) If an employee who is included in a church plan separates from the service of a church or a convention or association of churches or an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section

501 of title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches, the church plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of this paragraph merely because the plan—

(I) retains the employee's accrued benefit or account for the payment of benefits to the employee or his beneficiaries pursuant to the terms of the plan; or

(II) receives contributions on the employee's behalf after the employee's separation from such service, but only for a period of 5 years after such separation, unless the employee is disabled (within the meaning of the disability provisions of the church plan or, if there are no such provisions in the church plan, within the meaning of section 72(m)(7) of title 26) at the time of such separation from service.

(D)(i) If a plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of title 26 fails to meet one or more of the requirements of this paragraph and corrects its failure to meet such requirements within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed to meet the requirements of this paragraph for the year in which the correction was made and for all prior years.

(ii) If a correction is not made within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed not to meet the requirements of this paragraph beginning with the date on which the earliest failure to meet one or more of such requirements occurred.

(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "correction period" means—

69a

(I) the period ending 270 days after the date of mailing by the Secretary of the Treasury of a notice of default with respect to the plan's failure to meet one or more of the requirements of this paragraph; or

(II) any period set by a court of competent jurisdiction after a final determination that the plan fails to meet such requirements, or, if the court does not specify such period, any reasonable period determined by the Secretary of the Treasury on the basis of all the facts and circumstances, but in any event not less than 270 days after the determination has become final; or

(III) any additional period which the Secretary of the Treasury determines is reasonable or necessary for the correction of the default, whichever has the latest ending date.

3. 26 U.S.C. § 414(e) provides:

(e) Church plan

(1) In general

For purposes of this part, the term "church plan" means a plan established and maintained (to the extent required in paragraph (2)(B)) for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501.

(2) Certain plans excluded

The term "church plan" does not include a plan—

(A) which is established and maintained primarily for the benefit of employees (or their beneficiaries) of such church or convention or association of

70a

churches who are employed in connection with one or more unrelated trades or businesses (within the meaning of section 513); or

(B) if less than substantially all of the individuals included in the plan are individuals described in paragraph (1) or (3)(B) (or their beneficiaries).

(3) Definitions and other provisions

For purposes of this subsection—

(A) Treatment as church plan

A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

(B) Employee defined

The term employee of a church or a convention or association of churches shall include—

(i) a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, regardless of the source of his compensation;

(ii) an employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches; and

(iii) an individual described in subparagraph (E).

(C) Church treated as employer

A church or a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 shall be deemed the employer of any individual included as an employee under subparagraph (B).

(D) Association with church

An organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, is associated with a church or a convention or association of churches if it shares common religious bonds and convictions with that church or convention or association of churches.

(E) Special rule in case of separation from plan

If an employee who is included in a church plan separates from the service of a church or a convention or association of churches or an organization described in clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(B), the church plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of this subsection merely because the plan—

(i) retains the employee's accrued benefit or account for the payment of benefits to the employee or his beneficiaries pursuant to the terms of the plan; or

(ii) receives contributions on the employee's behalf after the employee's separation from such service, but only for a period of 5 years after such separation, unless the employee is disabled (within the meaning of the disability provisions of the church plan or, if there are no such provisions in the church plan, within the meaning of section 72(m)(7)) at the time of such separation from service.

(4) Correction of failure to meet church plan requirements

(A) In general

If a plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 fails to meet one or more of the requirements of this subsection and corrects its failure to meet such requirements within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed to meet the requirements of this subsection for the year in which the correction was made and for all prior years.

(B) Failure to correct

If a correction is not made within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed not to meet the requirements of this subsection beginning with the date on which the earliest failure to meet one or more of such requirements occurred.

(C) Correction period defined

The term “correction period” means—

(i) the period, ending 270 days after the date of mailing by the Secretary of a notice of default with respect to the plan’s failure to meet one or more of the requirements of this subsection;

(ii) any period set by a court of competent jurisdiction after a final determination that the plan fails to meet such requirements, or, if the court does not specify such period, any reasonable period determined by the Secretary on the basis of

all the facts and circumstances, but in any event not less than 270 days after the determination has become final; or

(iii) any additional period which the Secretary determines is reasonable or necessary for the correction of the default, whichever has the latest ending date.
